AUGUST 15—HARDEST MONTH FOR BABIES

Child Health Talks by Dr. Janetta McF. Jennings, Assistant Director, Bureau of Child Health, State Board of Health, Louisville, Ky.

August is the month in which the greatest number of babies die from diarrhea, says Hygeia, popular health magazine published by the American Medical Association. It is a serious one. The heat affects the baby directly, and it also makes difficult the keeping of the milk for his consumption. Severe diarrhea is not common among children who are breast-fed, but the reverse is true in the case of bottle-fed babies. Diarrhea and digestive disturbances in general are far more frequent among babies who are fed on boiled or condensed milk than among those who get fresh pasteurized milk.

Babies that live in the country and those who get out of doors much of the time are not so susceptible to diarrhea. The outfit, air of apartments and tenements is conducive to cases of diarrhea. When the digestive processes are slowed down by heat, the infant's system is liable to infections, and numerous diseases may develop such as cholera infantum, colitis, scarlet fever.

1. Nurse your baby. Do not wean him until your doctor says so. If he is bottle-fed, keep the milk clean, on ice and covered from flies. Dirties or too ripe fruit is very bad for young children, and ice cream is not always a good thing for them. Do not allow them to eat between meals, and do not worry if they eat less in summer.

2. Keep the baby cooled boil-if water between feedings.

3. Give a bath once a day. A sponge bath several times a day in the hot weather is not enough to keep the baby comfortable.

4. Keep the baby's body out of doors, protected from the sun and heat, and from flies and mosquitoes.

6. At the first symptoms of diarrhea send for the doctor. Call boiled water for drinking. Do not feed until the doctor is consulted. The doctor can check a simple diarrhea if called early.

ADVERTISING KENTUCKY

(Lexington Herald.)

Members of the Kentucky Real Estate Association in convention here yesterday determined to go fully into the matter of advertising widely the opportunities for farming in Kentucky. A committee is to be appointed by the board of directors of the association to confer with the state commissioner of agriculture, to the end that the state may be made more attractive to outsiders.

Kentucky has been advertising and along this line as have many other states as focused by Nature's generosity. At the present time, however, the opportunities in the Bluegrass in the world," The Blue Grass land for the most part is a motto "you will have to show me" has made up its mind to show others. Some States, such as West Virginia, have sign boards along their sections advertising the advantages of that section in all kinds of farming.

Not only should Kentucky farms be advertised, but it is equally important that the products of Kentucky farms be advertised. "It seems from Kentucky" should be a label that would guarantee excellence upon products. Many of the best growers of California have found such advertising invaluable that their propaganda now would almost lead one to believe that no other soil in the United States but theirs will grow a tree or vine. And there is a well established and acceptable truth about advertising. "It pays."

In the United States last year over 11,000 persons were murdered, 1,000 were killed, 200,000 were children, and 430,000 were injured by automobiles.

My Favorite Stories

By HENRY A. COMBS

Why the Major Didn't Suit

Once upon a time one of the Colonel Sims from New York in search of a major for a regiment of Rough Riders. Standing over the canon, he looked the assembled crowd of cowboys, the Indian Reservation and Texas.

A little later the enthusiasm, ignoring the corner, handed up the following: "Look here, Colonel Sims, I've understood what kind of a job you're looking for, and I want to say right now that there's one man in this crowd that can't have it. I'm the object to say anything about the character of any man, but I'm going to say this much: I'm willing to bet my last dollar that I'm the only man in this crowd that ever killed a man. I've killed my man, and
