EDITORIAL COMMENT.

In just ten days "vacation" ends for the school children of Nicholasville. The wonders if it has been profitably spent; if the youngsters will enter school refreshed, by rest, or if the three months' rest, will a stronger bodies and consequently lighter minds?

It is particularly gratifying to note the attention that is being paid to the health of school children these days. In the times when one spoke upon one's state and pointed with the end of a sleeve, we as took our chances in health; the poorly ventilated and germ-laden school rooms. That we, some of us, "got by," is no reason that these were the "good old days." We lived in spite of the small attention paid our health, not because of it.

Today, in the primary grades, especially, the child's bodily development is given as much attention, as well-regulated schools, as to his mental. Health examinations, which some fool in the penny lunches, fresh air in the school room, a new law for no home tutoring and the old red school-house with its tightly closed windows and rusty box stove.

Slowly we have gotten away from the old idea that education must be a haphazard and sallow We have realized that a weakened body, some physical defect is many times often responsible for the failure of a child to make the proper progress in the school. We have learned that a sound mind in a sound body is the ideal or should be the ideal in every school.

Two acts looms, cunning from a neighboring town to Lexington, carried 1,500 passengers in a single day, recently, according to a local man. What is to become of the short passenger rates on the "Big Ways?" It really seems unjust that after the enormous investment that the building of the railroads and the maintenance of its equipment of rails, they are to be almost completely abandoned out of the passenger-carrying business by automobile houses. The hour has come to stop, however, there can be no doubt of that. It is important that they be made to "pay their way" and no doubt the railways will devise a method of meeting this competition. The same law is a step forward in progressive transportation and seldom, if ever, to our experience, does progress do permanent harm to business.

"You cannot hope to console one who is in grief unless you have known grief yourself," says the Youth's Companion. What a sermon in a sentence! The sentiment has been more crudely put, by Mrs. Wiggs, was it not? who said: "There so ain't never lasted turkey, don't know how turkey tastes." We quote, subject to correction. At least the thought is there. Putting oneself in the other fellows place may be done only by having experienced that grief or misfortune from which the other fellow suffers. It is an altitude which makes for tolerance, that causes us to view with much charity the shortcomings of others.

Last Tuesday's Lexington Herald takes us to task, somewhat regretfully, for our lack of interest in things political—and they say of it, is "to quote a phrase from its editorial, The Herald is quite right.

Time was when the British ideal of politics as a career was, to our mind, the consummation devoutly to be wished—and still it would be, as will not always be, but we have become wearied, to quote Disraeli, of "statesmen whom democracy has produced into politicians," and somehow of late it has been impossible to "do our stuff," except with tongue in cheek, and in that statement we except politicians of rare, creed, or previous condition of servitude. And yet we would not condemn politicians, as closed by Webster as "one skilled in politics; a statesman," but not when they so exploit.

Now The Mercury is a Democrat; a few degrees of latitude north or might be a Republican, but we doubt it, which goes to show that we are pretty badly bitten by the partisan bug, after all.

But we think that in commenting on our recent arrest the Prosecutor the Herald forgets that one comes closer to the firing line in interservice warfare as conducted by bellicose Democrats in the country, than in the city. It behooves one, who has the interest of party at heart to wait into the heat of the conflict a bit of fresh air from the eternal verities of life—the musing of birds, the smell of hoeds frying cool a wood fire, the murmur of a mountain stream and the cool, quiet immensity of star-strewn heavens, to gain strength from our rearings.

In the love of Kentucky in substitute for her progress. The Mercury yields to none. We have had the opportunity to say that of statement will be accomplished here in this administration or by the people of it. We are supposed to believe that neither this partisan nor that, burglar than an honest man, if, maddened as they may, will be able to hinder the progress of a commonwealth blessed beyond every nature of her beauties and her inherent wealth, by her matchless history and her heritage of courage to race always in the forefront of the No Nation.

And as to the red bird, which doesn't pay taken, neighbor, doesn't pay to keep his cheer. Turn-like whistle, a contribution tax of love times to lighten the task of those who have to work with bended head and blind eyes, to chose or perish in the race, dark for gold.

Let us then be up and doing—carry the Herald, and that's where we found it quite paper. But we should shirk a task, no matter how distasteful. But everyone should remember, then they are all what time more suspicious for a newspaper of Democratic Think than in the midst of a Democratic party.

During the time in which the Chamber of Commerce has been in existence it has been the aim of as allowed ourselves to lose interest in the work of the organization. We have attended the meetings and the coming of fall, The Mercury is quite sure of a revival of the enthusiasm which marked the first year's work of the club.

It is hoped that a full attendance may be secured at the meeting to be held this evening at the reservoir for organization interest and evidence upon the part of the individual members necessary to the success of a Chamber of Commerce.

Carlisle has been favored with costly marking life on porches unfavorable mosquitoes and slipping through windows apparently well screened to make sight hideous with their annoying and cheep impudence.

All nice barrels, dung garterings, open screens and pools and most of the mosquito pests can be destroyed by scraped with kerosene, which at the same time is the breeding mosquito.

If concerted action in spraying breeding places would be secured, Carlisle would soon rid itself of this annoying and often dangerous pest.

OUR FEATHERED FRIENDS

By Zella Wigest

Agricultural Extension Department, International Harvester Company.

English sparrows are among the worst birds. They are quarrelsome, greedy, pestiferous. Wherever English sparrows become abundant, valuable native birds are driven out. Barn swallows, wrens, bluebirds and other useful insect eating birds have given way to this pesky little robber.

Undoubtedly English sparrows destroy insects enough the first year of their lives to pay for all the grain they eat, but because they drive off the birds that are so much more valuable as insect destroyers—must condemn them. The young are fed almost wholly on insects and even the adult sparrows find that grasshoppers and weevils make a nice addition to their usual fare. Insects form only ten per cent of the food of adult sparrows. Grain and other vegetable matter makes up seven per cent and weed seed 17 per cent.

Many cities have had effective campaigns against sparrows. The first undertaking to reduce the number of English sparrows should be very careful not to kill our native sparrows which are of benefit and are protected by law.

Probably the best and safest way to get rid of English sparrows is to destroy their nests. They raise from two to four broods each year. A systematic destruction of their nests will cause them to leave the community.

POEMS THAT WE LIKE.

MOONLIGHT OF AUGUST

Something in the wild marsh,
Something in the night,
Something on the white hill
Mystical as rain—
Rain that is a mist blown,
And isn't mist at all—
Moonlight of August
Upon the garden wall—
Moon that is so silky,
Soaring round cold skies,
Golden on the hillside,
Silver on the sea!

Makes the very fairies
And the fays and elves
Come to dance the moonbeam,
Shaking of themselves
Shaking and a-shiver
There beneath the bower
Of the starry woodmist,
Of the white moonflower—
Haunting moon of August,
Prize and ye fair,
There about the wild hill
A thousand fairies peer!

All the little silver bells,
Now they ring a tune,
Mounted of the moonlight
That we heard in June—
Now that summer seems
Lost amid the deep dells
Of the meadow-grasses—
Longer to "Hide Seek,"
Gets's a comfort in the paper from your o' home town.
There's an entertainment
section where they prey,
Where you have about through livin' far away.
If there's people is ragin' or the
mumps is goin' round
You can read the proof from us;
home town.
I read the comin' papers and the
carrin' papers, too,
An' I sometimes think it would be a sort of skip it through.
But when I want some pabulum,
which sometimes I am in form'
I unwrap the little paper from my
home town.

They say our good ad had deeds are writ in water.
So that God can classify us when it comes to Judgment Day.
If that be true, I know a man who's
writin' a song,
He's the great who runs the paper
for all the home town.

SUNLIGHT FOR BABIES TO PREVENT RICKETS

Child Health Talks by Dr. Josephine McF. Jennings, Assistant Director, Bureau of Child Health, State Board of Health, Louisville, Ky.

Recently it has been found that rickets, the commonest of all diseases of infancy, can be cured by treatment with sunlight. Of course this is not a substitute for the DEVELOPMENT of rickets may be overcome by sunlight. But prevention is better than cure. It is during the first weeks of life that the child is in very large proportion of babies, and if these weeks are spent in sunlight baths, as well as out liver oil, most be given at the same time, the sun's rays are analyzed it is found that some of them penetrate the skin, healing tuberculosis and rickets. The ultra-violet rays do not pass through window glass the visible light and heat rays do, therefore, sunbaths in the Ultra-Violet Rays do not cure rickets. Even the sun's rays are powerful as effect on living tissue destroying bacteria and healing tuberculosis and rickets. Now that every one of the out-of-doors in August in Kentucky is perfect for the baby to be out-of-doors in August in Kentucky is perfect for the baby to be in the open air by the banks of the river and down to the morning songs, an accompaniment for a baby's outdoor life. The baby can find sings soprano and the bullfrog gets in at the bass and every one with a barber shop bass.

Now is the time and the traditional idea of November, with all that they portend of cold and ill, will soon be here. Every man who loves his family feels that they should say to himself, "If I die or am taken away suddenly, I am sure as the stars shine and the old constitution remains unchanged upon the books of state, the mandates of that document will be executed and those left behind will be an election free every year—off years pulled off.

Lawmakers must be chosen to translate the sentiment of the people into statutes, and officers must be selected to serve in the executive offices. There can be no washing of hands. The birthright of freedom and equality carries with it the unalienable duty to a sovereign state.

It may be said in behalf of Warren Fisher that he is not a politician. He is not lying in wait as the lines are formed up that he may better indulge in destructive criticism and mud-sling from the sidelines when the fight is on. From this Kentucky has suffered greatly in recent years. This is one of the reasons that editorial office continues to be known as a thankless job.

Mr. Fisher, apparently, just likes peace and comfort, the cool breezes of the summer's night, and the symphony of nature's choir.

But there is, so much to be done. Nature glorified Kentucky and more than a garden cluttered by the stewart army of mountains to the eastward, and stretching as a love where the Father of Waters brings her his richest gift to the south the thirst of fields and pastures. Nature did her part, then nature quit. She is enjoying her August. Nature too is on a permanent vacation, but development must not quit. It must go on, and if it does so, citizenship in Kentucky cannot stay on a permanent vacation.

Winding streets, unwinding tender meadow cut walls through the hills and pile up beauty that they do not build roads. The birds find busy and build their nests and then pour forth their souls in song; but what benefit is there in a schoolhouse or instructed a future governor in the mysteries of reading or algebra? And they do not cast taxes, these birds of the air and streams of the pleasant valleys.

"Let us then be up and doing, with a heart for any fate; Still achieving, still pursuing" learn to labor and to wait. But to do more labouring than waiting.

THE HOME TOWN PAPER

When the events' meal is over so the dishes are washed,
And you settle down to store your feet with Sayonara slippers for the day,
Comes a peaceful feelin' o'er you, brushin' from your face a weary look,
As you scan the weekly paper from your own home town.
It tells you all about who's sick or who who come an' go;
Likewise the comin' vendor at the farm of Jabez Snow;
The health of the Cider mill in Jongo to "Hide" Brown;
Gets's a comfort in the paper from your o' home town.
There's an entertainment section where they prey,
Where you have about through livin' far away.

POLISH JOURNALIST

Tadeusz Gobrynowicz Has Interesting Career in This Country

Tadeusz Gobrynowicz, a Polish journalist, visited Paris last week and recently. Among his belongings in the hospital was two obituary notices written by himself a short time before his death.

It recounted the devotion of a loyal journalist to his work, and on behalf of those for whom he wrote. It contained this paragraph:

"Now, just before his death, he has at last found a moment, not only to devote to printing of his obituary, so as to take an additional bread broken from the shoulders of his colleagues, who also have no time to spare."

Concluding the obituary, Gobrynowicz asked his readers, if they felt that he deserved to rest in peace, to say a brief prayer for him. Answering those who might say it was cowardly to anticipate those goals of free blessings, he said:

"Even if it is so it will have been the first and certainly the last time I have been afraid, for the part of an exploiter or profiteer."
