The Puritan hated bear-baiting, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectators. —Macaulay.

DOMINION OF THE AIR.

In the midst of this sublime and terrible storm Dame Partington, who lived upon the beach, was seen at the door of her house with mop and pattens, trundling her mop, squeezing out the sea-water, and vigorously pushing away the Atlantic flowers. The Atlantic was roused; Mrs. Partington's spirit was up. But I need not tell you that the contest was unequal; the Atlantic Ocean beat Mrs. Partington. —Sydney Smith

Mr. Arthur Brisbane, who has been visiting Edsel Ford's new flying-machine factory sees a standardized, all-metal, Ford-built aeroplane in existence not as the ubiquitous lizzie within a decade. Perhaps he is right; we are sure that he is right in urging this country to increase its air defenses, and the rapidly increasing wonders of an age of invention should prevent skepticism in the face of the most extravagant prophecy.

The writer can remember when the late Julius Fleischman, the pioneer of Cincinnati, used to enter the newsboys sling Race street to run to their friend down as he employed by on a single cylinder If we are not mistaken, he owned the first automobile in Cincinnati. This was scarcely twenty-five years ago, but no one who stands at the corner of Seventh and Race streets in Cincinnati today and watches the stream of traffic, it seems, scarcely believable that in 1900, when left their scooters and sold their chewing their desks to watch an automobile pass by.

Perhaps pleasure cars when the air will become a sight, as usual to everyone in a decade or two than they will now. Indeed, we would be willing to take such action as to wager a box of cigars that we will not live to see the day when the Wright brothers, events in the handling of an aspect, who is able to glide for a holiday, still regard as a "freak."

In our conquest of the air we yet must overcome a worthy foeman, one more dangerous than the sea, one to whose our great steel ships are as nothing, except when stirred by the power of the air. One wonders how long stretches of the aspect which springs in the heredity of an eye from peaceful agent to the hurling fury of a storm. All of these years men have been building their homes, mostly from stores of wood and stone and concrete and steel, stronger and stronger, and yet the instinct of hurricane comes twisting out of the West and man's handiwork is scattered as the wind of a child. When will be done to avoid the repetition of such a catastrophe? The house will be rebuilt and later is all. Men, with all of his progress and discoveries, is as helpless as a savage in the face of a cataclysm of Nature. Man has learned to fly; he will fly more and more, doubtless, but never safely, unless that Nature which "speaks a various language," which is both tender and beautiful and horrible and pitiless, smiles propitiously upon his puny efforts.

ALMOST A LOST ART.

A spelling-match, in which every school child in the county is eligible to participate, will be held here Saturday. The movement is being sponsored by the county school superintendent and will give many children who were disappointed because they were unable to take part in the former contest an opportunity to display their prowess in the well-nigh forgotten art of "spelling."

Mrs. Taylor states that the improvement in orthography since the other contest has been marked and the interest in Saturday's event is expected to be keen.

Spelling matches might be more generally observed with benefit to all. Those of us we read the general run of "copy" which comes in to the newspaper office can vouch for this fact.

Now, it is not our intention to be critical of the methods of our primary instruction. We know little enough about it, in the first instance, to believe teachers have enough worries without being mocked by the expression of lay opinions. However, it does seem that while the ability to read quickly and with more expression is quickened, the pupil schooled in the "sight method" of reading becomes a fearful and ever-growing "spell-er."

Somehow we believe that when the school-boy of yesterday was given a jaw-breaker like "incomprehensibility" and in the usual sing-song gathered his syllables in during choruses of twos and threes, ending with the complete word in a triumphant exhalation and many times, by the uniform length of the oiled piece of work—well, we believe that word was comprehensible there-after to that boy.

All of which will prove to be somewhat modernist, no doubt, that age creeps upon us when we write. And so you may take it, but if you will but read the "copy" which we have preserved for the fruitfulness of its orthography perhaps you will be inclined to a spelling-match of your own.

Perhaps, however, we are wrong. Perhaps the art will become a sight, as would to everyone in a decade or two than they will now. Indeed, we would be willing to take such action as to wager a box of cigars that we will not live to see the day when the Wright brothers, events in the handling of an aspect, who is able to glide for a holiday, still regard as a "freak."

AN ABLE EXECUTIVE.

Mr. Arthur Brisbane, who has been visiting Edsel Ford's new flying-machine factory sees a standardized, all-metal, Ford-built aeroplane in existence not as the ubiquitous lizzie within a decade. Perhaps he is right; we are sure that he is right in urging this country to increase its air defenses, and the rapidly increasing wonders of an age of invention should prevent skepticism in the face of the most extravagant prophecy.

TOO MUCH HASTE.

Mr. James Speed, editor of the Southern Agriculturist, writing under the caption, "Brance That Travel Too Fast," says:

"I have had my attention fixed upon this matter for some time, and have been waiting for a time when I made about the middle of February I was in Louisville, Ky., and wished to get to Louisville, at the earliest possible moment. Unfortunately for my trip by rail, but resolved. I would use the automobile. I myself just how rapidly the driver would carry me long stretches of good road.

"I set back in the driver of a well-oiled Studebaker tourer car. The speedometer was placed in front of me where I could watch it continually. On the first stretches of the smooth macadam needle swung slowly to the right until it rested on the 30 mile mark. Naturally, this speed was not considered for any length of time, but over the best sections of the road it was not difficult for the driver to do several miles from fifty to fifty-three miles an hour."

The automobile has it as innovation in travel which has become suddenly popular. There are those who believe that the wide-spread use of this means of travel is unfair to railroad companies and interurban lines, using as their argument the fact that the railroads and interurban cars travel upon steel rails over a right-of-way for which they have paid; that the automobile has uses the turnpike and "uses it up" without making sufficient returns to the road funds.

On the other hand the bus is the more convenient to those who live in the country. It is not necessary to go to a station and busses have more frequently scheduled runs. It seems to us that the bus has come to stay, if it continues to merit the approval of the public. That it can lose its popularity by careless and fast driving and a few tragic accidents is sure. It has already done so with many, who prefer to wait for a means of transportation they regard as safer.

The wise operator of a bus line will see that the speed of his cars is held within reasonable limits.

Some eighty members were secured by those soliciting for the Chamber of Commerce after two days work. This should prove gratifying to all those who are interested in the continued progress of Carlisle. However, more members are needed to make the work of the organization effective and with these additional members The Mercury hopes that there will be many farmers who realize that the Chamber of Commerce is of benefit to Nicholas county as a whole as well as to the town of Carlisle. We do not believe that the dues for service will be realized until both town and county work together for the advancement of all.

IS YOUR CHILD MALNOURISHED

(Child Health Talks by Dr. Jaquith, McF. Jennings, Assistant Director, Bureau of Child Health, State Board of Health, Louisville, Ky.)

It is estimated that one child out of every three is handicapped in starting life by malnutrition. Many parents have the idea that malnourishment is found in children only, this is not true, however, for there is as much malnourishment among the children of the well to do as there is among the poor. There are five chief causes of malnourishment—correct these and watch your child grow.

1. Physical defects such as adenoids, diseased tonsils, decayed teeth and defective vision.

2. Lack of home control. Parents often fail to control the appetites of their children.

3. Overfatigue. Late bed time, irregular hours for meals, school work and too many home duties after school or extra demands on rest.

4. Bad food habits. Eating between meals, too long hours between meals, not eating enough food, too many sweets, tea and coffee and the wrong kind of food, that is, greasy, improperly cooked food.

5. Bad health habits. Not enough fresh air and exercise, not enough sleep and rest, unhappiness and worry.

The signs of malnutrition may easily be seen if the parents will carefully observe their children. The signs are:

Paleness, blue shadows under the eyes, mouth breathing round shoulders and protruding abdomen, standing posture—the "pigeon breast" type—protruding abdomen.

more than 7 per cent under-weight. There are certain conditions which indicate malnourishment, restlessness, forgetfulness, lack of energy, irritability, excessive timidity and bad digestion or "nervousness."

Weigh and measure your child and if he is underweight, find out why he isn't up to normal. Have a thorough examination made to discover his defects, then change his health habits and watch him grow into the fine class of Malnourished children.

Scientists claim that the child of a father over fifty years of age has ten times as good a chance of becoming eminent as he would his father were a young man.

DUSK ON THE HILL ROAD

The long, sweet, twilit roadway of dusk file
A shy star trembling on the farth est crest,
Deep-nested valleys where the still dusk file
With slow, far-reaching shadows of the west;
Tender and wan a little moon hangs low
Glinting a winding river, silver-gray;
Amber and pink, the sun's faint afterglow
Brushes the heights, and slowly dies away.
And down the dew wet, fragrant dusk the road
Goes on, unfretted, where the sun much glows,
And gleaming goldenrod nods with its load,
And here, the crimson berry of the rose.
And now the greatest height, where far lands lie
All soften soft within the twilight grey;
Vast distances and silences—and high
Thoughts lifted like as holy ones who pray.
And then a valley where the breezes blow
The deep, sweet breath of freshly upturned loam,
A lighted lamp across the fields—and lo,
The one who came the hill road has come home.
—Gingo Noll Crowell, in Scribner's Magazine.

No Railroad Man Started at the Top

The business of conducting a great transportation system is not one which can be learned over-night or mastered by men and women who have not had practical experience. There are no "soft berths" in this organization, no useless jobs and no "appointments from the Governor."

Every important position—in every department—is held by a man or woman who has been trained to do his or her particular job. Every important position in the Executive Staff is filled by someone who has risen from the ranks.

Such care in training makes for both safety and efficiency in railroad operations and has made American railroads the most satisfactory transportation systems in all this world.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

AN ANGEL WON THIS RACE

Boston, Aires, March 29.—An Angel won the year's premier South American automobile road race over 1,500 kilometers (865.4 miles) here today, lowering all previous records for the course, which runs through much rough and mud, as well as over hills and rocky roads.

The Angel was Angel y Luis Marsill who, bearing the hoodoo number 13 on his Special Studebaker, led a field of twenty-four starters from the finish at the end of the course, which broke down all but nine entrants. The route was from Buenos Aires to Rosario to Cordoba and return.

His time was 21 hours, 27 minutes. The best previous record was 24 hours, 45 minutes, set by a Studebaker last year when Mariano de la Fuente won. Paris Zanchetti, also in a Studebaker Special 8ix, was second and Zanardi, driving and Italian car, an Alfa Roma, was third.

Twenty of the twenty-four cars entered were manufactured in the United States, including four Hudson, two Essex, three Stutz, a Packard, Lincoln, Chrysler, Reo, Gardner, Haynes and Fiat.

This is the fourth consecutive year the Gran Premio of the Argentine Automobile Club, as it is called, has been won with a Studebaker, each year with a different driver.

The race attracted attention first in 1922, when drivers from all over South America entered, the course then being 730 kilometers. It was won by Antonio Orsbio in a Studebaker Special 8ix. In 1923, William T. Burke, in the same kind of car, led the field from the start.

Last year, de la Fuente, who had driven in every previous Gran Premio in different makes of cars, mounted a Special 8ix and set a course record for the 1,049 kilometers which had not been equalled until Marsill cut nearly three and a half hours from his time today.

Road race driven in South America has no conception of the character of the roadway over which these races are run. The outcome is much less a test of speed than it is of the ability of a car to stand the wear and tear. At no time during the race was run have as many as half of the starters finished.

Only seven cars of the twenty-four lined up at the starter's tape finished the race. The first two home were Studebakers. Last year there were only two finished and fourth, second place going to a Hudson.

The race has established American made cars firmly in the Argentine and adjacent territory, as no foreign made car has ever seriously threatened to win the grinding run. This year's performance by the Alfa Roma is the best a foreign made car has ever shown. It is the third year in which a veteran driver of the country abandoning his other mounts, has come to victory in the South Bend car.

COUGHS
Quick Way to Stop Them

Persistent, racking coughing, which so often leads to serious throat and lung trouble, can be relieved almost instantly by the following time-tested recipe, which is used in more homes than any other cough remedy. Mix in a pint bottle, 2½ ounces of Pinex, and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Take a teaspoonful every one or two hours. Keep the throat well coated when the cough is severe. Also rub the throat and chest with Vicks. Pinex is a concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, rich in the natural healing elements of the pine forests. Vicks penetrates the inflamed surfaces with the healing vapors of Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme, Turpentine and Cubeb. Pinex and Vicks relieve coughs because they are made to relieve coughs. Money back if not satisfied. Pinex, 60c. Vicks, 35c and 60c.
