RAIN.

... and the soft rain dropped With lulling murmur.

Lulling it certainly was and never was more welcome sound to man's beast, than it patterned earth, than the patter of the rain upon the eaves, coming gently to break a blistering drouth.

"It always has rained!" And so it did—not enough perhaps, for few of us are ever satisfied with the weather—but enough to relieve a condition which was rapidly becoming serious. We should be so grateful as the thirsty earth, which already pops for her cooling drink with a tinge of freshening green in the grass blades, a better freshness in the perfect beauty of late summer flowers. Nature has answered the cry of her own.

"While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest are, cold and heat, and winter and summer, and day and night shall not cease."

RANDOM ARROWS.

The weather has been hot and editorial writing hard to fill, else we think that so excellent a newspaper as the Lincolnshire News would have resisted the temptation to fill a "stickfull" of port paragraph spats by taking a gratuitous fling at the work of the extension division of the College of Agriculture.

Nicholas county has had its share of "doubting Thomases" in the matter of agricultural extension work, but it has been refreshing to see the conversion of many of these through the efforts of a thoroughly capable and conscientious county agent. Experience, the best of teachers, has proven the value of the county agent and his work in this county so we believe it will elsewhere in the State.

It is easy to feather a barbed shaft of editorial wit, but the effect of the random firing of such darts more often works an injury to a worthy cause that the shooter rarely intends.

Under the caption "County and Extension Agents and the Peanut Gallery," the Lexington Herald, of last Monday, says:

The Elizabethtown News is a recent issue says:

"The News has never been much impressed with county farm agents and home demonstration work, and that was before we read that a specialist from the University of Kentucky is going to be at Hopkinsville next Monday to teach girls how to trim hats."

It is easy for the enemies of any constructive step or service which is ministering to the needs of the people to pick some little flaw or to exaggerate some incidental and inconsequential feature so as to give an entirely incorrect version of what is being done.

If there is any county in the state which could afford to be without a county agent it would be Fayette county. The remark often has been made that because of the presence here of the Agricultural Experiment Station, the advice of the experts employed in close at hand and free to all, but the county of Fayette has been so convinced of the benefits of a county agent that one has been employed, and there is little chance that Fayette county will ever decide again not to keep what has been proved to be a most valuable investment.

A county agent for more than pays for himself, and so do the extension workers of the home economics department of the extension division of the College of Agriculture, who, while they do upon occasion teach women some such things as how to trim hats, do many things of the utmost importance to the state. Their work is most practical. For that matter hat trimming is no mush josep party. The agricultural agents are able to help lighten the burdens of the housewives as the county agent and the extension expert are able to increase the harvests of the farmers, because while the home wife is busy and while the farmer is attending to his business, the experts are studying under the best conditions for observation, certain specific problems. They give the value of their research along certain lines to those who have been unable to take the time from more comprehensive labors to study out particular problems.

If the editor of the Elizabethtown News would attend a few demonstrations conducted by extension workers from the College of Agriculture, we think he would learn something about what this very beneficial service is doing in Kentucky as well as learn something about farming.

A DREAM COMING TRUE.

Another of our dreams seems to be coming true. Time and again we have urged that an effort be made to establish telegraphic communication with the outside world, and this week it is most gratifying to see a definite move made toward the realization of that "dream."

A canvass of the town was made by a representative of the Postal Telegraph Company this week to determine the amount of business that may be expected in the event of the installation of an office.

As this is written, the result of that canvass is not known, but The Mercury feels sure that the new office will grow rapidly, once an office is established here. Existing conditions call for a telegram to Paris and receive incoming telegrams by telephone and sometimes by mail. As a consequence few telegrams are sent and perhaps even fewer received.

The Mercury believes that the needs of the telegraph under present conditions is not an accurate criterion of the volume of business that would soon develop, once an office is established here. It is to be hoped that the Postal Telegraph Company will take the same view of the matter.

A MODEL LUNCH ROOM.

One of the very best things at our city school is the Penny Lunch, established and fostered by members of the Parent-Teacher Association. In fact it has been for sometime the outstanding feature of the association as it has traveled to other counties, where it has been used as a model in the establishment of similar school lunch systems.

Recently the school board has installed a new serving counter and cafeteria rail, in order to expedite the serving of lunches. As many as wish to do so may enjoy food as good as may be secured at any first-class restaurant and at a cost somewhat thoroughfare [illegible] "Main Street." The ease with which the office tourist getting out of Paris is waiting for the other out on "Main Street" to turn into some other avenue.

THE ORPHAN BRIGADE
(Nathaniel S. Shaler)

Yes, verily, a horrific time! Such a time and such an invention, of which "the Preacher, the son of David, king in Jerusalem," might have written. "It is a mere already of old time." For this indeed would be something new under the sun. However, one imagines that it would not flourish for long, under either sun or moon, for the sons of men and likewise the daughters would soon be no intent upon the slaughter of each other, that the inventor's patent rights would be worthless.

Then there would be the "static" to contend with. This would be "Jones," if one may judge from the oral glimpses we now get of some brains. And "fading?" Lord! that would be worse than static. In fact many brains would not produce a "station whistle." And such a devilth invention would be breakingstring just which brain we had in mind in that last sentence. And we would be forced to go somewhere else (Greenland or Paris, may be) and miss all the fall football games.

Again we join you, brother, right heartily, in the wish expressed in the last paragraph of your editorial, when you say:

If anyone has the secret of intercepting the odiferations of brains in the form of radio waves, let us hope that he passes to the Heavenly Father quickly, taking his secret with him.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION.

The State Board of Health warns against an epidemic of typhoid, which may be expected to follow the breaking of a long drouth, by reason of the pollution of wells and springs with filth carried in by surface drainage.

Typhoid is not prevalent in Nicholas county at this time, we are informed, but every care should be taken by our people to prevent such an epidemic. Prevention may be accomplished by care upon the part of each individual in keeping his premises clean, his house properly screened, and boiling the supply of drinking water where its purity is doubted.

Vaccination is recommended by the State Board of health as the best means of preventing typhoid. That it is thoroughly efficacious in the prevention of a disease which is the scourge of camps, has been proven in the late war. Every Tom, Dick or Harry physician will administer this cure.

An ounce of prevention in the case of a disease which so often proves fatal is worth a pound of cure.

The effort to stop part-owners holding on dog rivers is a selfish selfishness. The only difference between horse racing and dog racing is, horses do not run in dog racing.—Cynthiana Democrat.

But "dogs" run in horse races, and they know when "race thing" applies into the stretch as the winner passes the wire.

JUST DO YOUR BEST

B. B. Taylor
In every walk and phase of life
Just do your best.
In days of joy or days of strife,
Just do your best.

In everything, both great and small
Just take a hand and roll the ball;
No matter if you stand or fall
Just do your best.

If something great you'd like to start
Just do your best.
If others tell you you're not smart,
Just do your best.
Set in the place where you belong
Take up your pace and jog along
And prove the other fellow's wrong—
Just do your best.

If you are called to preach or pray—
Just do your best.
And find there's nothing you can say
Just do your best.
Assume the best of meaning air
And tell the world you are a heir,
Let others stop you if they dare.
Just do your best.

If something you would like to do,
Just do your best.
And doubt if you can put it through
Just do your best.
You can, the scorn so others could;
Though fair indeed the toss it sited,
If it's your best, it's surely good—
Just do your best.

Better Service Than Ever

THE scope and efficiency of long distance telephone service has made our nation one big friendly neighborhood. To talk across the continent is almost as easy as calling across the house to your next-door neighbor.

The long distance lines in Kentucky are a part of this nation-wide system, and also serve a vital need in the business life of the State and the South.

To care for this growing demand will require an expenditure of $275,000 this year for reconstruction and additions to the long distance system in Kentucky alone.

The long distance service is better than ever before. The transmission is clear and the operators are handling a larger volume of calls with speed and accuracy.

Merchants, manufacturers and business men are utilizing this service to increase business and reduce expenses. Why not try it?

SUIT FILED FOR LAND AT BLUE LICK SPRINGS

Mrs. Jessie Holladay Ogle Asks For Possession of Land And $50,000 Damages From C. C. Cole

Suit was filed in the Nicholas circuit court Tuesday by Mrs. Jessie Holladay Ogle and her husband, Harry C. Ogle, of Paris, against C. C. Cole for possession of the property controlled by Mr. Cole at Blue Lick Springs. The plaintiffs also ask $50,000 damages from Mr. Cole for detention of the land.

The petition alleges the property was sold by the Master Commissioner of Nicholas county to James H. Holladay for $5,000, that said Holladay is now dead, and plaintiff, Mrs. Jessie Holladay Ogle is the sole surviving heir-at-law to properties.

Plaintiff says in the petition that at the time she inherited the land she was an infant and of such immature and youthful age that she did not know her rights and privileges in the premises and the parties under whom the defendant, C. C. Cole, was claiming claims color of title and C. C. Cole wrongfully took advantage of said infancy and obtained possession of said land wrongfully and without right.

The plaintiffs demand of C. C. Cole possession of said land, containing ... acres. Plaintiff avers that the said C. C. Cole now holds and has held possession of said land wrongfully and without right ever since he entered upon it, and asks for $50,000 damages against the defendant for its detention and that title of said land be cuieted, and C. C. Cole be adjudged of no interest in land.

At the same time a suit was filed by J. M. Boss, of Paris, against Reid Holladay Ogle and C. C. Cole for possession of the tract of land containing the hotel property at Blue Licks. Mr. Boss recently purchased this property from Mrs. Ogle, but cannot obtain possession until the present suit is settled.

James H. Minogue is attorney for the plaintiffs.

The possession does not show the amount of land in the possession of each, but it is understood, that about 400 acres were comprised.

The land has been in the possession of the Blue Lick Springs Company and Mr. Cole for many years.
