THE ROAD BONDS.

The nitwit, who pins a bit of orange ribbon on his coat lapel and strolls into the parlour of some "Irishtown" on Saint Patrick's Day, is scarcely less popular than the man who says "bond issue" to the sorely tried farmer and the hunkies in home owner, both of whom already grunt and sweat under a load of taxes from which three seems to be no surcease.

In realization of this fact being clear, it is evident that The Mercury is not seeking to increase its popularity by reaching the conclusion that the very best thing the voters of Nicholas county may do is to vote the $75,000 road bonds, by which will be added $225,000 by the State for the completion of the first forty system of roads in this county. In fact it will have to be done, it seems to us, if our primary system of roads is to be built within a decade. It is a decree or, as the French put it—a last resort, a case of necessity, if we are to get the roads. At least that is our conclusion from a survey of conditions throughout the State.

Nearly every county, where the primary road system is incomplete, has voted bonds to complete the roads, with the help of the State Road Commission. It is reasonable to believe that the work of road construction will begin, first in those counties and that until such work is finished, the "no-office" counties will wait. Perhaps we are wrong in our surmise, but in brief, it is not an unreasonable conjecture.

It's a case of climbing in the band wagon, if we would ride. And ride we will, these days, even if the going is as rough as to put a spike beyond the mistentations of a chiropractor.

So it seems to The Mercury that we should all curb the tendency to "go backward" when a bond issue is mentioned and consider the sugar coatings of this kind-pill. It is a solid pill, after all, and except for the fact that it is just one more tax it would be noticed scarcely at all by the average tax-payer. It will mean ten cents more to be paid on a hundred dollars of taxable property, we are informed. It will mean that all the primary road system will be maintained by the State, and that the county funds will be released for side roads and for the upkeep of such farmer's with which "Nature takes the unexpected out of spring and fall long-suffering") and it will mean that our main highway will be kept reach before we exit, entirely through the succeeding generations into the clay.

The editor of this newspaper was inclined to "rare up" a bit himself at the prospect of "just another little tax," but we are out one who believes in a fare can be called a truly "optical" by cutting off one's nose. Failing to use the road bonds, while counties all around are climbing into the band-wagon, would be taking a diet off our noses, perchance. Think it over.

WHY WRECK THE FALLS?

In a letter from Mr. Vance Prather, Secretary of the Kentucky State Park Commission, he asks an unanswerable question, as it seems to us, in regard to the proposed damming of the Cumberland River and the consequent destruction of Cumberland Falls in all of its valuable scenic beauty.

Mr. Prather writes:

"Kentucky has eight major rivers —Ole Kentucky, Ole Licking, Green, Barren, Rolling, Pikeville and Cumberland—with a local stream tributary of 12,000 miles, all within the State.

"Why devastate and utterly wreck and ruin the finest thing we have—a priceless heritage left to us for the relaxation, rest and recreation of thousands of tourists from 1926 and 47 other States? Its value for recreational advantages for centuries and more dollars-and-cents value for commercial exploitation. And in effect such dams were built (if built) the wreckers fold their tents, and like the Arab, silently steal away.

"It is hard to conceive of the ruin that would be wrought by the use of high explosives, blasting, cement-ing and wrecking away of virgin hillsides on either side of the picturesque Cumberland. The building of sugar trusts, or service trusts, the destruction of wild life that would naturally follow the erection and use of service camps for some 500 or more men, the disregard of growing things and the utter havoc and disarray of these affts that Nature so lavishly has bestowed, would be unthinkable.

"Yet do not see Niagara destroyed. Why? The Government of the United States would not permit. Public opinion—and public opinion is a mighty force—has saved Niagara to the generations of the future. The same public opinion should be united against the destruction of Cumberland Falls."

The only conceivable answer is that a line of reeking smoke stacks is more valuable to Kentucky than the natural beauties of a mountain waterfall. The reason, as we see it, is about all Kentucky would get from the proposed power plant. The current would go to other States and the money to pay for that current would go into the pockets of Northern capitalists living in other States.

As Mr. Prather says, "the utter horror and disaster of these gifts that Nature has so lavishly bestowed would be unthinkable."

Cumberland Falls should be saved. An aroused public opinion will save it.

UNITED PARTY NEEDED.

It seems to the Mercury that Mr. Barkley, the only announced candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, should be permitted to choose the method of nomination. According to the daily newspapers, he is said to prefer the primary.

A meeting of the State Central Committee has been called to consider the method to be employed, in the interest of party harmony and as the first requisite of success in December, Judge Barkley's wishes should prevail.

It will take a united party to defeat Senator Ernst in November. A divided fight now will prove ruinous.

THIS, THAT AND 'TOTHER

A page from the diary of a country editor.

Up bottom, being awakened by the pounding of hammers on Carl Moore's new house, which he is building in Elm street, and find the morning glistening and Mary's at the ed-birds making merry in the trees just at the window. While taking my morning coffee I do much a sparrow before the roof, efforts of a bird bath, which doubtless he needed, being without a filthy fellow and a nuisance.

To the office, where comes the news that dogs have killed three sheep in the country during the night and several calves in "Chicken Bottoms," so that Newt Rankin forgets to keep all his new cisco while which he has just finished, very much needed. Also comes the angry post and I do read congratulation on my new press, "Rarkley" from Sir William Ardery, who pens a letter about the Democratic Convent. And he says, twitting me:

It is presumed that the press, having all the latest improvements, is a dual purpose press, after printing the Mercury's tax press, no doubt, will be able to convert the hackberry crop into a liquid form so that Nature may promptly and efficiently take its course.

But, alack! his presumption is unfounded, for this Rankin, I know, is as crotchety as a prehistoric mastodon. He will insist that it is to the lack of a bit of bray that I must lay out, it seems, seven pounds to purchase. And I doubt me that the most of our blank hackberries with which "Nature takes the unexpected out of spring and fall our good country for that purpose by residents of Bourbon and hence we find that Dame Nature do take care of her own, merely patiently and politely with the elderberry.

And I am brought to remember that time, when my father would take reach to Millions and Mercy and otherwhere and did wander in entire Sunday to engage black-berries for a Lexington feast, who would have it that Nature take her own seasonal gallons of June and fall, and running Monday morning, the irregular harbor did dispatch a message that he did not wish the Mercy. Whereupon our Father, being himself liable for the payment, did fall into a great rage, swearing that none but a hopeless dullard and a half-witted boy would go to such "Feast a ——— harbor." And Mamma spoke truly and as I recall, much put out because Father, by mistake, to the dinner of the Board of Commerce, and the error, it seems, but honestly made me did fall to the lacking of how to put in print stone and, while those of the business men out everywhere quickly, as are those of the doctor, they would not, it seems, be the wood-rifal that mistakes are so few in the public print. I do not say that Mercury lasts be some 1,100 words of the Lexington feast and some 1,200 the page and when it is considered the average man can seldom write out a shilling "letter" without being bothered for so many days, interlining, it seems that we do mighty much for the money that those who "never make mistakes" do retain the creators on their pencils.

Comes a letter from Gene Wise, now Oklahoma, in which he urges more privileges about the time of the old Mercury office and the heroine engine, the gasoline, the service of which he remembers. And I fall to musing of the days of the journeyman printer, those birds of passage who walked in and walked out, on the spirit did move them. Has there been the only dishonest journeyman I ever saw, who stole my old blue suit of serge cloth and bartered it for drink in Reynolds? And the drink wasting rascal within him, he did forge two cheques on the Kim-eagles page;

The North-wind sweeps from the brooding Pole, and our ancients crash cold roses;

But when the gloom of the canyon's womb is the valley's lap we lie;

From the white foam-fringe, where the breakers cringe to the beach that tests the sky,

We climb, and we peer in the crags that frame the glorious city's golden eye.

Gain to the topper of the hog-back ridge where the vision ranges free;

Pines and pines and the shadow of pines as far as the eye can see;

A steadfast legion of stalwart knights in dominant empery.

Sun, moon and stars give answer; shall we not staunchly stand,

Even as now, forever, wards of the wilder strand,

Gaining of new silliness, lords of the last, lone land?

UNION COUNTY'S HONOR

(Courier-Journal)

It is a great honor, that of Union County's, in being officially recognized by the United States Department of Agriculture as the first county in the United States to be free from cotton and grown in bulk. Contesting for this high distinction, under Government inspections, were practically every county in the South.

Union County, back during the war, when the Kentucky Farm-Bureau Livestock Association was encouraging Kentucky farmers to feed the 40 or twelve herds of blooded beef stock, the Clerk of the Nicholas County Court in Deed Book 38, page 137, recorded the sale of a single herd of blooded bulls and not a single grade bull in the herd. The purchaser, who has worked indefatigably with the cotton boll weevil since, is the last grade bull weevil sold on April 1st.

Union is one of the best farm counties west of Louisville. Even in the days of slavery, the secret of renewing its county fair, and the improvement of its cattle, the county should be an incentive for the re-birth of this institution. The agriculture in favor of pure-bood stock as against scrub was but obvious and well known to be repeated here. Everyone knows by this time that blood pays, in dollars and cents. Kentucky's agricultural Experiment Station and the Kentucky Livestock Improvement Association, which have consistently encouraged the "Kill the Scrub Sire" movement, share in the glory which is Union county's.

TAKE YOUR HOME

COUNTY PAPER

The Burley Tobacco Grower often has urged all its readers to subscribe to a local newspaper. We do not see how one can get along without it. We not also to have at least one good daily newspaper, but the daily newspaper from the home town, it seems to us, is absolutely necessary to the happiness of the household.

In a recent editorial, the Wisconsin State Journal, at Madison, paid a high tribute to the local newspaper under the caption: "Unselfish Service Behind the Local News-paper."

"The Local newspaper in the United States is each year getting on a firmer foundation, and becoming more and more useful to its home town and its home community.

"It is the home newspaper which boosts the town, year in and year out, which takes the lead in every enterprise which has for its purpose the upbuilding of the community.

"We frequently hear it said that the editor is independent and that the newspaper is gone; that its editorial policy is governed entirely by the business office. Yet this is not true. There is more unselfish devotion in the average local newspaper than in any other business enterprise. It frequently speaks out in the way which it believes will be for the good of the nation, and of the community, regardless of what the consequences may be from a business standpoint.

"The local newspaper is the principle booster for the community, and in doing so becomes entitled to a fair hope of material reward. Unselfish service to a community is another appreciates nor supports its home newspaper."

We have said practically the same thing in Burley Tobacco Growers' Tobacco Grower. The local newspaper is the unselfish ideal champion to stand by your friends. The Carlisle Mercury has been loyal to the Burley Association ever since it was organized and it is hoped that it would have attained the success it has at the present time without their backing. Let all show our appreciation.—The Burley Tobacco Grower.

MAY MADNESS

A cure little now for riches that the world withholds from me—
Gold was never less appealing, never weaker fortune's plea;
For without a guaranteed penny
I could still be blithe and gay
On the sunny side of thirty in the merry month of May.

I've a sympathy for sorrow, for the broken heart and bowed,
But the sorrows of the many who are quick to cry aloud
Seem today but selfish fancies, mere
Which, if courage but commanded could be banished by a smile.

Grief that kills has slight expression, deepest sorrow silent lies,
But when stanch hearts are breaking, there's a smile within the eyes.
But exaggerated sorrows by a cast
Seem but selfish, four-hoy, fellow
With self-pity at their head.

Anytime musings quick convince me
That I'm not worth a single sigh,
And that sorrow throws on he-and
Is the lengthening but briefly ever
When a brave heart gives it battle;
What's a sorrow, what's a grief?
That life's ebbing what my make i,
That we're what we're to be.

It may be but fleeting fancy the
today gives life its glow,
But it's Maytime madness—all
it is, I'm glad to be,
For married is I'm feeling like
a stranger to it all woo,
Though my sunny side of thirty passed some thirty years ago.
