STANDARD WOOL GRADES ADOPTED

Standard wool grades for the United States and Great Britain have been adopted at a recent meeting in Washington, attended by manufacturers, dealers, wool producers and representatives of the departments of agriculture and commerce and of colleges of agriculture. Prof. L. J. Horlacher represented the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Experiment Station.

Under the new system, standard grades are designated numerically. The coarsest wool is designated as 36s, and the finest grade as 80s. Kentucky quarter-blood will be 48s; half blood, 56s; and 60s, and three-eighth-blood 56s. Grades for lambs are designated in the same way.

The new grades are not compulsory, but Prof. Horlacher predicts that they will become universal. Manufacturers attending the meeting unanimously approved them.

The standardizing of wool grades is the result of six years' work on the part of the bureau of agricultural economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, of which Dean Thomas P. Cooper of the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Experiment Station is chief.

Tentative grades formulated and examined throughout this country several years ago were well received. They were based upon the old "blood" classification. It was found, however, that there were some differences in American and British standards. A committee representing manufacturers and the department of agriculture was appointed, and careful and exacting research in agreement with the tentative grades based upon the system of fiber.

CRITICISING NEWSPAPER IS A FAVORITE PASTIME

(Springfield Sun)

Criticising the home newspaper is the favorite pastime of a large majority of the people.

Like public officials, what it says and what it does are considered before the public and its errors are very easily detected.

An individual may go through life and his mistakes are often covered, and few will know it, but let your newspaper err in even a small detail and the critics have a chance to display their wit.

Newspapers, though mechanical, are human, because they are conceived by human minds and put together by human hands.

They are as liable to error as any man or woman and their opportunity for making mistakes is as great as to every line—in every word and every sentence—there is a possibility of typing, of name, title inaccuracy or what not, yet the newspapers' editors, no matter how earnestly the effort and his association may strive to be accurate.

All your home newspaper asks is that you be charitable. Make a few allowances for the difficulties that bound the newspaper publishers, and remember always, that nothing earns a newspaper editor quite as much as to have his subscribers pay.

It has no chance to cover them up. Don't forget that newspapers are made by human minds and human hands, and to err is human.

TO TEACH MARKETING

(Versailles Leader)

With a view to the early education of young farmers in the principles of marketing agricultural products, a unit designed for use in agricultural high schools and schools in which give particular attention to the study of agriculture, has been prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The book is being sent out by the department of experts, of which Dr. Joseph Coffey, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., is chairman, and is sponsored by the agricultural education association.

The idea was suggested by the marked success which has attended similar instruction in the subject as set forth in Denmark, where the co-operative spirit has been developed through definite, instruction in the folk schools.

That's behind the plan declared by the committee, which is to give definite forewarn of the benefits of co-operative marketing after they have been explained to the individual pupils. Hence it is sought to bring marketing education in the schools.

As former Governor Lowden of Illinois, a member of the trust fund committee, said recently, "The farmer needs not only development more than any other class, but he needs more than any other class to learn how to market what he has produced."

HENS NEED MINERALS

When overworked or insect-annoyed hens go on a strike and refuse to lay, the trouble usually is the lack of minerals in their rations, according to specialists at the Kentucky College of Agriculture and Experiment Station.

Hens that are overworked by being forced to produce eggs at a rapid rate without the shell or membrane forming properly, or without incorporating enough of the necessary mineral matter in the shell to make it strong enough to withstand the handling of eggs in marketing, are frequently overcome by exhaustion and collapse.

Hens that are annoyed by insects and lice will not produce eggs. Dusting with sulphur, tobacco dust or insect powder will help to relieve the annoyance.

Pat Sammons, 65, prominent Maysville business man, died at his home in that place Monday after a long illness.

"Who Left the Cellar Lights On?"

The Real Answer Should Be—

"Who Cares?"

DOCTORS say we use only part of all in everyone's intelligence. The rest of burning a cellar light is one of the least of all.

for example:

You can burn a cellar light all night long for just about the cost of a postage stamp. [And a cellar light is the best sort of watchdog, anyway.]

It's even more foolish to stint on light from the lamps that you are actually using on light for reading, and sewing, and card playing, for kitchen and basement tasks. Strained eyes and tired backs, broken dishes, spoiled meals and tempers, cuts and burns—these are some of the costs of inadequate light. And enough light costs so little more.

By careful management, high efficiency and rigid economy, the Kentucky Utilities Company has kept down the cost of electricity in what it was in 1913. The cost of all other commodities has risen 65%.

Use local manager still sufficiently active about the proper lighting of your home. Step in today and ask him

the one big difficulty of auto painting

POSSIBLY you know some one who refinished his car with unsatisfactory results, in spite of the carefulness with which he did the work. Very likely the trouble was that the finish was not sufficiently self-leveling.

As soon as you brush on Devoe Motor Car Finish you will notice that it levels itself down to an equal depth. It will not pile up at any one place, also make a ridge or spot. It is this elastic self-leveling quality of Devoe Motor Car Finish that enables the difficult auto painting to be accomplished guaranteed to give satisfaction when applied according to directions. Practical tests prove Devoe Quality.

Gypsies, Apprehended Here After Robbing Millersburg Man

A quintet of gypsies, four women and a man, with a little baby, paid a brief but eventful tiem visit to Carlisle Monday morning shortly before they entered his father of $10.

Shortly after their arrival here, Sheriff Burton took into custody the party, who were traveling in a Dodge touring car with Arkansas license, and held them until Prosecutor Arnsparger, who investigated one of the women and found he had a record and that he would not prosecute if she would return the money.

After a hurried consultation, the money was produced, and Sheriff Burton escorted the gypsies thirty minutes to leave the county. "Fair enough," one of the women retorted, and they left pocketable.
