The Lexington Tobacco Market

At Lexington, on December 5th, will open the grandest Burley market in the world.

At Lexington will gather buyers from two continents to bid on our most famous product.

At Lexington are located the three large, modern brick warehouses of the FAYETTE TOBACCO WAREHOUSE COMPANY, an organization whose record on high average prices obtained in the past stands at the very top; an organization formed by Tobacco Planters for Tobacco Planters, whose platform is the same as the day it was organized; an organization whose selling fees are the same they were twelve years ago, which fees were adopted largely through the efforts of the management of the Fayette by the loose leaf warehouses in Kentucky; an organization whose stockholders BELIEVE in the method of selling tobacco on the open loss leaf market (having tried all other methods); and one which, by its standard of doing business has long enjoyed the confidence and good will of the buyers and planters.

The Burley crop is short. We are pleased at the prospect of a good market this winter. Our three houses will be open day and night, and we have sufficient dryage capacity to take care of and unload all trucks promptly. We solicit the patronage of all old friends and new.

By the members of our receiving and sales organizations, none who have trained for years to faithfully, care our customers; to enlighten them on market conditions, and to help the day to the future in the past, working as a unit, they may produce the high dollar for their customers' tobacco at auction.
