A Combined Bridge Over the Ohio River is the One Key that can Open the Maysville Gateway

The future of Maysville and the country from Paris, Ky., to Dayton, O., depends on a north and south railway across the Ohio From Maysville, Ky. to Aberdeen, O.

For more than half a century men who have figured big in the life and development of Maysville have realized the necessity of a railroad bridge across the Ohio River at this point.

Maysville was the first p rt of entry for central Kentucky. It was the most important post in the overland traffic days. Citizens of Maysville led in the building of the historic Maysville-Lexington Turnpike. Then with the coming of the railroads the men who had thus far built the thriving town of Maysville, with a vision that penetrated the future, clearly foresaw that Maysville and the country south and east could never reach their highest possibilities without a north and south railroad crossing the Ohio river here.

This vision dominated the keen, practical men of that day. More than one move was made to realize the vision. More than once men actuated by the desire to advance the best interests of their town and country tried to carry their ideas into effect, but invariably met up with financial obstacles they could not surmount.

WE ARE READY TO GO NOW,

Today more than ever it is apparent that this bridge must be built. Fortunately, so far as finances are concerned, it can and will be built just as soon as Congress grants the authority.

Maysville is a great natural Gateway for freight and passenger traffic north and south. It is made so by its location with reference especially to the great coal-producing regions of south and east Kentucky and also the fertile agricultural section nearer at hand.

But it takes a key to open a gate. This gate has never been opened simply because Maysville has never provided itself with the key.

THE KEY TO THE GATEWAY

The key to open the Maysville Gateway is a combination bridge for railway and vehicular traffic, as well as foot passage, across the Ohio River from Maysville, Ky. to Aberdeen, Ohio.

It is not a matter of mere expediency; it is a matter of actual necessity to the growth and progress of eastern and n rthern Kentucky and a large part of southern Ohio. It represents the one, vital, outstanding need of this whole section. It is both logical and inevitable and ought to be evident to every thinking man and woman.

This combination bridge means ultimately the operation of a mainline railroad from Paris, Ky., to Dayton, Ohio, along which lies the destiny of this section.

The Maysville Bridge Company, incorporated in Ohio with a charter to do business in Ohio and Kentucky, is prepared to furnish the key—to build this bridge.

PERSONNEL OF THE COMPANY

This company is composed of these well known Kentucky and Ohio men:

Horace J. Cochran, Maysville, President.

James M. Wilson, Cincinnati, Vice-President and General Manager.

Thomas A. Duke, Maysville, Treasurer.

O. W. Bennett, Cincinnati, Secretary.

Wendall B. Campbell, Cincinnati.

Those five comprise the board of directors.

A bill has been introduced in Congress providing for the construction of this combination bridge by this company. Actual work will begin as soon as possible after the enactment of the bill into law.

Meantime the company is proceeding with the very extensive preliminary work necessary in such an enterprise with adequate financial resources at hand.

This introductory statement will be followed by a complete analysis of this matter which vitally affects every man, woman and child in this great section of these two states. We ask simply a careful reading of our statements to the end that the whole question may be fully understood.

Another bill has been introduced in Congress, providing for a bridge for vehicular purposes only. Some proponents of that plan suggest that both bills be passed. That would, of course, defeat the whole purpose of providing for the combination bridge; for it is evident to all that the two propositions probably could not be financed.

Respectfully,

The Maysville Bridge Company
