When You Buy a Sack or a Barrel of

White Rose Flour

You have not only made the purchase of a necessary article which is guaranteed to give you entire satisfaction, but you have really made an investment in what would term "Civic advancement," because practically every penny of the purchase price has been contributed largely for raw material, labor, etc., and all your money remains for home to be used again in the channels of local trade.

When You Buy a Sack or a Barrel of

Foreign Flour

You do so perhaps because your grocer hands it out to you not realizing that you are taking a shingle off the roof of your own home mill, in which we believe you are interested, but are contributing to the advancement of some Ohio or Indiana town, in which, perhaps you have no interest whatever. When you buy a sack or barrel of foreign flour, your money, with the exception of the dealer's small profit, leaves your community never to return.
