POVERTY

Who walks beside a rosebud
And does not sense its bloom,
Its lovely form and color,
Its delicate perfume;
Who walks beneath the heavens
And does not see the sky,
The sunrise and the sunset,
The tint that glow and die;
Who treads a rural pathway
And never hears a bird,
Nor notes the trembling grasses
A passing breeze has stirred;
Who dwells among his fellows,
And sees them pass his door,
Nor ever hears their heartbeats,
Is pitifully poor.

"Home of Better Clothes"

When Mary Jones Disappeared

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

IT WAS the day of the fire in Mother Lawrence's bakery that Mrs. Covertown realized its possession of a mystery. First, it was found that the girl who roomed over the burned shop was gone and then, when attention was given this quiet woman, it was discovered no one knew where she worked or anything concerning her comings and goings. Mary Jones in the flesh was a modest and lonely girl occupying a single room over the establishment in which Mother Lawrence mended shirts and darned socks for bachelors. Now that she was gone she became subject for puzzled comment.

A rumor that Mary had been burned in the little building in which she lived was set at rest by Mother Lawrence herself.

"First thing I did," the matronly proprietor of needlework first-aid station said, "was to find out see if Mary was there. The room was empty. Mary was gone."

Slowly the gossip spread. When it was ascertained that no one knew where Mary had worked it was assumed she must be an idler. Others thought she must be a thief because seen on the streets in the daytime although none from one to the evenings, she had graced the theater of the main dining room of the Covertown hotel. The police questioned some in the hotel and Mary was interrogated with the mysterious Mary.

"Why, boys, you know that dear Mother Lawrence replied, smiling in a sweet way that was her stock in trade. "You know I fix the clothes for the men who have no wives or sisters to look after them, keep me busy all the time. Now you tell me I'm busy encouraging Mary in the daytime. Perhaps I haven't heard her walking about overhead. I don't know, it's hard to tell, I always liked Mary, though, she was so pretty and lighthearted. I spent a few days past week with Mrs. Maggie Thomas.

Misses Elizabeth and Sophia Shea will go to Berea Tuesday to enter school.

Mrs. Silas Jackson and children visited Mrs. Tom Jackson one day the past week.

Mrs. Z. R. Ritchie returned home Saturday from Kinswood Camp-meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. Willie Ritchie and Mr. and Mrs. Silas Jackson and family were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Jackson.

What a Nerve!

A friend of mine reports that, in a charitable mood, she invited two sweet souls from an old ladies' home here in town to be her dinner guests.

After they had eaten, she decided that they would enjoy listening to the radio as much as anything else, so she made them as comfortable as chairs with pillows at their backs, and tuned in on a speech by one of Gene Tunney's leading pulpit orators, telling of the real meaning of democracy and of the necessity for every one to let the spirit of democracy rule their daily lives.

The hostess noticed that one of the old ladies was growing a bit fidgety after a few nervous glances about her, this soft-spoken guest addressed the hostess shyly:

"I—I don't think I ought to listen to this. My husband was a Republican, and here this man is telling us we should all be Democrats!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.
