HOW PIONEERS MADE SALT AT BLUE LICKS

Ohio river to get the supply of powder left there by John Clarke? Jones and George Rogers Clark, on their return from Virginia, and somewhere in Bourbon or Blue Lick and the (Licking) river, of 25 December, 1776? met the Indians on our ol. c. Clark's trail and got totally routed. Mr. Jones was killed and three others are killed and taken as prisoners."

Salt continued to be made at intervals at the Lower Blue Licks from 1778 until after the Battle of the Blue Licks was fought, August 1, 1782, and within a year or two thereafter the industry was being regularly conducted on a large scale.

Numerous references may be found in the records of those early times to this business of making salt at the Blue Lick Springs, and more or less complete descriptions have survived of the methods of manufacture in use. One of the best accounts of the process was written by a French engineer, General Victor Collot, of the French Army, who, in the year 1796, descended the Ohio river and, during his visit, made a sketch of the Lower Blue Licks and the approach to the Blue Licks and the access to Limestone to Frenchtt, making en route an accurate and graphic map of the highway. Describing the approach to the Blue Licks and the access to Limestone in progress there, General Collot says:

"At the end of this plain, we passed a rivulet, and descended two miles a very steep road full of stones came to Blue Lick.

"The whole of the country from the plain is dry and barren, covered with rocks, and consequently barren; the only objects of vegetation we descried were a few small pines growing out of the crevices of the rocks every thing else around bears the marks of sterility desolation and sadness.

"We found a kind of manufactory at Blue Lick, which probably has acquired its name from the salt spring which rises there, and forms of a very fine blue; on tasting this water, I found it brackish, and that it required a thousand gallons to make a bushel of salt. Several kettles are placed on the spot for 20 shillings of Virginia, three dollars and a half. We may conceive what must be the consumption of wood to obtain so considerable an evaporation. The fuel is procured at the little value of the spring since the forests around supply it gratis, and indeed the mode of manufacturing too is extensive, and very similar to that which I have already described in the treating of the salt works at Vulnes's Burgh, in Virginia.

"The mode of salt manufacture at Vancebourg is what is in use throughout. Ky. It thus described by the author

"Four kettles, suspended like those of a gardener's well, are employed in drawing the water, which is emptied into a little reservoir made of the bark of trees, and placed on small rafters, which forms the outer part of two troughs framed of the trunks of trees, and from thence into boilers or kettles, are of different sizes, and the largest contains about 20 gallons; they are placed one above the other on stone stoves cemented with mud. The whole of the government of Virginia, but there is reason to believe that Boone's salt kettles were larger than those in use at Vancebourg, as the use of such large kettles is still in existence. The rim is fastened to the top of the stove, for the salt and exposure to the weather, but this does not appear to have been an important implement used by the pioneer salt-makers in their operations at the Blue Licks. It appears to have been used when in perfect condition, about 3 feet in diameter and about 20 inches in depth. It has a flat bottom. When filled to capacity it probably held from 40 to 50 gallons of water. It is now owned by Milton W. Curtis, of Piqua, in Miami county, Ky., a member of the Blue Licks Battlefield Monument association, and it is the expectation that it will eventually be presented as a relic to the state park commission for permanent exhibition at the Blue Licks Battlefield park.

This salt kettle, which the evidence at hand tends strongly to show, was one of those originally used by Daniel Boone and his contemporaries at the Lower Blue Licks in the year 1778, came into the possession of Mr. Curtis in the latter part of last year (1927). He acquired it from Mrs. W. H. King, of Sardis, in Mason county. Mrs. King was a Miss Gifford, a daughter of the late Ben Gifford, whose wife was a Miss Kenton. The first husband of Mrs. Gifford was J. T. Whaley, a first cousin, who was a son of "Aunt" Hilda Kenton, a sister and niece of General Simon Kenton. Mrs. Whaley lived to be nearly 102 years old and died at her home near Mt. Olivet, the county seat of Robertson county, in 1911. The old kettle was presented to Mrs. King by her aunt, Mrs. Whaley many years ago, and at the time she sold it to Mr. Curtis, Mrs. King had herself owned the kettle for about 46 years. Her statement is that it has always been known as the 'Daniel Boone kettle," and has passed down through several generations of the Kenton family.

From this it will be seen that the kettle is authentic. That it is genuine is fa...ly well authenticated. There can be no question as to its antiquity and its environment and associations sufficiently verify the tradition of its origin and use.

This venerable relic of pioneer times will be on exhibition at the Blue Licks when the 146th anniversary of the battle of the Blue Licks is commemorated and the beautiful monument is dedicated on Battle Ground, August 19 next. It may not inappropriately be called 'the Liberty bell of old Kentucky," and its appearance may be gained from the picture published with this article based upon a photograph recently taken of the kettle by its present owner, Mr. Curtis.

Alex Bruce son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Bruce of Millersburg while a member of a camping party at Blue Licks met with an accident in the bridge over Licking river last Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Bruce was riding on the running board of an automobile when a passing car struck him, pushing the handles of both doors into his side one of them entering and in the flesh a distance of an inch and a half. Both handles are bent out by the impact.

Young Bruce was taken to his home in Millersburg, and while his injuries are very painful, it is not thought that they are serious.—Kentuckian Citizen.

LYRIC THEATRE

See advertisement of Harper's Garage on Page 7.

The Weather: Showers Thursday; not much change in temperature.

The second storm in a week swept the west coast of Florida Tuesday.

A large crowd was here court day and merchants reported business fair in all lines.

The residence of Marvin Shrout, in Liberty Heights, was withdrawn Saturday, after being bid to $2,850.

Martin's Garage reports the sale of a Buick Sedan to Mrs. Lindsey Wilson by Mr. Jake Boyd, of Bath county.

John Squires Reed is nursing a pain of battered knee caused by jumping off into shallow water, while swimming.

Mr. J. C. Berringer, of Richmond, came Monday to succeed Mr. Frank Downing at the local L. & N. offices. Mr. Downing goes to Maysville.

A prominent local merchant informs The Mercury that there will be a big balloon descension ryes, that's the right word; at 10 o'clock Saturday morning on Main street in Carlisle. You shouldn't miss it.

Mr. H. T. Sfhea advertised a second hand touring car two weeks in the classified columns of The Mercury. "It did the work," said Mr. Shea Wednesday. "We sold the car right away at the price we asked." Classified ads are little and cost little, but they get results.

Quite an event in real estate circles will be the combination sale here Saturday. Nine pieces of property will be offered for sale at auction to furnish music for the occasion. C. U. Bramblett, local realtor and Auctioneer of Speaks of Paris, will conduct the sale

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Kimbrough will move to Lexington nex tweek, having sold their home on Dorsey avenue to Thomas Cameron, who with his family will take possession about August 20. Mr. and Mrs. Kimbrough have leased an apartment on Franklin avenue.

Mr. James Saunders, who had both legs broken some eight weeks ago, when he cranked a truck that was in gear went to Lexington last Friday and had the casts removed. The broken bones have made a good union but it will be some weeks before he is able to walk.

No rocking will be allowed in the warehouse, where the Agricultural Fair is to be held this year, owing to a provision in the insurance policies that would void the insurance. The "hotdog" stand will probably be erected in the space now occupied by the American Legion holds the concessions.

The construction work on the filter at the city reservoir is proceeding rapidly Superintendent Joe Clay states that they will be ready to put the brick masons Monday and that the work now under way will be completed about September 20th. The installation of the filter will require approximately another month.

Dr. A. T. Gardner, local optometrist, received notice last week of his appointment as an examiner in optometry on the State Examining Board of Health. There are three examiners in the State and the appointment on the board is a well-deserved honor for Dr. Gardner. Despite the storms of Louisville, is chairman of this board.

A shuck of Country Gentleman corn, bearing eight distinct ears was brought to The Mercury office Tuesday. The corn was grown in Mrs. Ida Colliver's garden—"one ear for each of my eight children," she says. The central ear is quite a sizeable cob of corn and all of the others are perfectly formed, though small and are grouped about the main ear symmetrically. Here's a chance for an amateur Burbank to raise an "eight-in-one ears.

While in bathing with a party of small friends, John Collins, aged 4, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Collins, of Petersburg, Illinois, stepped off into deep water and was drowned one day last week. Young Collins was also one of the party of boys who were in swimming to save him, the child fought hard and sank. He was a grandson of John Collins, of Paris, formerly of Carlisle. His mother was, before her marriage, Miss Hazel McClanahan, Mr. and Mrs. John Collins attended the funeral, which took place in Illinois.

A letter from Everett Beers, Jr., to his uncle, Sam T. Howe, is filled with the delights of camping in Maine. The camp is conducted by his uncle, a brother of E. J. Beers, and this is Everett's second visit. He writes: "Just got back from South Branch, where I caught 14 trout and got the honor of being the 'best camper on the trip.'" He also is one of the nine boys who, with two counselors and an Indian guide leave on a canoe trip up the Alagash river into the wilds of northern Maine. This is an honor awarded for excellence in camp life. Young Beers took his early training from Worth Sapp, in the local Boy Scout troop.

Social and Society

The Mercury will appreciate it, if those wishing to give us personal and social items of interest, will call Mrs. S. W. Keller, telephone 12.

AN EVENT

(Tom Masson)

You see him every morning on the street,
His head is in the air;
A wonderful thing has just occurred,
And he has time to spare
In which to tell you much detail,
This great event to you.
"Last night," he whispers, "just at night
My baby said, 'Ah goo!'"

Kingdoms may totter on their base
And storms may whip shingles,
Kettle," but all things else are naught
Compared with news like this.
The household gods are upside down
And there is more and more
Than moving time or cleaning time
When baby says, "Ah goo!"
