BARTERVILLE

(J. W. Rogers, Correspondent)

Mr. I. C. Taylor entertained with an usual event last week. Some eighteen years ago a large hawthorn perse-mon fell in his yard. Only one was then removed. the rest remaining deeply imbedded, around them a tub of stone formed that protected it, and allowed the wind to blow. Upon opening a small crevice on his wrist last week the fruit was emitted and recognized by Mr. Taylor.

Republicans and Democrats alike are happy now that the election excitement is over. Republican claim results might have been worse and Democrats claim they might have been worse.

The time has come that we cannot longer judge the character of our neighbors by the honest face, neat dress, the educator of our young women by the fact they have been to school, or the unofficial.

If one should leave a bad umbrella in Barterville and take away a good one, that would be a mistake. Watch and see. Others should leave a good umbrella and take away a bad one, that would be a blunder. Watch and see. Others will avoid mistakes and blunders.

We are sorry to report a few violations of the eighteenth Amendment and the ten commandments, but we hope by some holies. Who? Who? Who? Who said anything about Hoover?" said a fellow by the way.

When our Honorable E. R. Kendall gets into Congress he might have a big speech, "If I should not live through my fifth and five. I do not want Congress to bury me, I have plenty of friends in Nicholas County, Ky., who will be more than glad to do that for me." One Congressman did that once but Ezra won't.

Our genial neighbor and business man, Thomas Asbury, is nearly always on the move He is usually found where it pays, in many ways.

The people of this section of the county should take their right to vote in their might for a greater high school at Barterville. If they do not, they may never have it. Read the handwriting on the wall.

Before his recent marriage Mr. Butler Ritchie was yearning for a woman, now he leaves off the "a" Bee? See? (Whiz-Bang.)

OLD MAPLE

Frances Higgins
Old maple wood remembers
Days that were bunsinous;
It treasures only
The gifts that were golden;
Its memory is cloth-of-gold
In which no dross lingers.

It dreams of amber honey
In a glare of sunlight,
Of sappy years slow dropping
Into the scented grasses,
Of ripe yellow corn
And gay lacquered pumpkins,
Of glowing sunks and stubble-fields
And glinting wings;
It mirrors the aureate dawns,
The golden gates of sunset,
The pale flame of spring,
The consuming blaze of autumn;
It reflects the gleam of candles,
And of far beckoning stars,
The glory of the sun
The lesser glory of the moon.

Old maple wood remembers
All things that were golden:
These only it cherishes
Through the long years;
Heed you and listen;
Its dreams are cloth-of-gold!

Carl Moore, who for the past several years has been with the firm of Ben T. Kirkland, left Monday for Lexington to take a position with the Lexington Dry Goods Company. Mr. Moore will be in charge of a department of the wholesale house. He will not move to Lexington at present.

LAW NOT OPERATIVE

The attorney general has given an opinion to the effect that the act of 1928, exempting from the payment of poll tax all persons who have attained the age of seventy years, does not apply to taxes to be paid this year, as the assessment upon which all taxes to be collected this year was made prior to the enactment of the law. In the future this law will exempt all such persons from the payment of poll tax.

1928 GOOD YEAR ON FARMS, VIEW

Despite the clamor of demands for farm relief legislation, Secretary Jardine in his annual report to President Coolidge declares that "it is beyond question that 1928 will go down in American agricultural history as a year of achievement."

Stating that the gross income from agriculture this year will be well above the 1977-79 total of $12,253,000,000, Secretary Jardine confidently couples his forecast with the statement that "this does not mean that agricultural grievances are insubstantial nor does it mean that the remedy for these very real difficulties should be left to the free play of economic forces. In fact agriculture is entitled to practical governmental help in rebuilding the foundations on a firm and permanent foundation."

DEPLORABLE CONDITIONS FOUND IN BOURBON HOME

The home of a white woman giving the name of Mrs. Amy Hamm, in Paris, was visited by Chief of Police Fred Link and Thomas Craven and persons found which evidences were found that a quantity of the liquor had been distilled there. The raid was made following complaint from a Paris woman that Mrs. Hamm had been operating and son had been kept there all night, and had returned home the next morning in a serious condition.

The officers stated that they found both white and negroes in the house and that the Hamm woman's fourteen year old child was ill with whooping cough. The case was referred to the grand jury for investigation.

ENEMY PAYS TRIBUTE TO WOODROW WILSON

Woodrow Wilson's ability to differentiate between politics in peace and war is praised by his one time enemy in The American Magazine when Brigadier General Henry J. Reilly, O. R. C., in discussing the wartime president, calls him "the greatest war leader of them all."

Listing as Wilson's four greatest wartime decisions, his selection of absolute reliance on his generals, his proposal of a single command for the forces of Service Law, his unification of the American Army under one chief and his refusal to attempting to strike the first blow in France, Reilly declares that these are "traits designed to win a war." He declares that the testimony of Generals Pershing, Bliss and March regarding Wilson endorse what he has to say.

It proclaims the wartime president says General Reilly, "free from a fault which in democracies is almost always a fault which has caused more defeats in war than has bad generalship in battle. This fault is the,failure to understand that the methods which make for a successful political career in peace are exactly the opposite of the methods which bring victory in war."

General Reilly was, prior to American entrance into the war, one of Wilson's most severe critics.

COSTING FARMERS $50,000 TO DELIVER TO FOREIGN MARKET

Lexington, Maysville, Paris, Cynthiana, Mt. Sterling,, Richmond, Harrodsburg, Danville and Shelbyville and there seems to be a screw loose somewhere that Carlisle was not included in the list. The fact that Mt. Sterling got a market this year was because they went after it in strong force.

It is the opinion of many that before we get a market here that equipment will have to be taken over from the Warehousing Corporation, as they will not discover of it, when it remains a fact they are not receiving any revenues. It is in the form of a "white elephant" on their hands.

The Nicholas county farmers and the business men of Carlisle and Nicholas county should get together and make an effort to finance such a move. It will be similar to the toll bridge plan—soon pay for itself.
