POTATOES AND TOMATOES
"Various crop freaks are reported throughout each year, but one discovered on the farm of George Marten on Cow Creek road, east of Havanna, takes first prize in that section.

During the spring Mr. Barnes planted a potato patch which yielded about 12 "spuds" to the hill and at the same time the potato vines were producing tomatoes which are about the size of a hen egg.

Mr. Barnes thought at first that tomato seed had gotten mixed in the hills with the potatoes, but close examination failed to reveal this and the farmer is at a loss to explain the strange occurrence.

Several persons have viewed the crop and vouch for the validity of the story. Mr. Barnes declares that it is an efficient way to garden, by growing two crops in space ordinarily required for one.

NEEDS NO RELIEF
A farmer living near Mt. Sterling on the Midland trail has changed the well-known old maxim to "it's an ill flood that brings no new good." During the flood last week, when the Licking was covered with about five feet of water at Salt Lick, he worked out a plan to aid stranded motorists which, it is estimated, brought him a total income of about $1,500. He did it in this manner:

Taking an old Ford truck, valued at at about $10, he would raise the front end of a stranded motor car into the rear of the truck and pull into the water. As the water covered the engine in his Ford, the owner of the other car, whose engine was out of the water, pushed the truck through the deep water. In this way more than 200 cars were taken across the water. A charge of $5 per car was made.

ACCIDENTALLY KILLED

Fletcher Payton, 75 years old, accidentally shot and killed himself at his home in Anderson county Monday. For several days rabbits had been destroying his cabbage plants and Monday he picked up a rifle and started out to see if he could kill one. As he passed through a gate the rifle was accidentally discharged and the bullet struck Mr. Payton just below the left eye, entered the brain and caused almost instant death.

1,804 IN PRISON

After playing "hide and seek" with officials of the Frankfort reformatory throughout Monday night, Theo Henson and Jesse Ganet were captured in an old boiler in the prison yard Monday. The two failed to report Monday night and a search was started.

Thirty-nine more prisoners were taken to the reformatory Tuesday, running the total of inmates to 1,924, the highest number in the history of the reformatory.

AD FOR ADD

(Harrodsburg Herald)

"Uncle Add" Blogher on Saturday made his usual annual donation of a handsome load of cabbage to each of the inmates in Harrodsburg and the editor of the Herald. Each year "Uncle Add" selects the best from his crop and himself makes the rounds of the parsonages, leaving the foundation for the makin's of a fine dish of corned beef and cabbage

REMUNERATIVE AND REFRESHING

(Glasgow Times)

Mr. Ed N. Caldwell is the champion raspberry grower of the county. A patch of the ever-bearing variety from which he has sold 17 crops, and the crop is just "coming in" good. These berries are delightful in flavor, well grown, and very remunerative. It appears this is a better bet than strawberries.

VIM, VIGOR AND TOMATOES
(Walton Advertiser)

The first home grown tomatoes of this section were brought to the Advertiser office Tuesday by Dr. A. P. Jones, of South Main street. The doctor said they were for the wives of the editors. This is quite an achievement for a sick man, as he has been in bad health for a long time but has gotten vim and energy than some of the more lusty ones. Doctor, we thank you.

Volstead Of Funkhouser Variety?
(Trimble Democrat)

Two snakes have been killed in Bedford this week. This is as many as ought to be seen in any prohibition town in one week.

"DINSMORE'S FOLLY"

Then I said—No, no second guessing! I won't put down what I said. It was a plenty. Having said it, I cried with more rage.

Then Josephine came out strong. She seemed to understand, though I don't think she knew the facts. She took me in her arms and petted me. "Poor, Fellow," she said. "They free dear. He's coming back, you know."

Sure enough, he was coming back. That was some consolation. "Well," I said, "he's eat breakfast, anyhow." So we ate it.

It isn't necessary to tell what we said as we ate our how we said it. If there was any phase of the day before or the night before that we didn't discuss I don't know what it was. Of course I did most of the talking. I always do. But the others did their share.

But it all came to nothing. None of us could suggest any explanation that was at all satisfactory. We ended just where we had begun.

We had scarcely finished breakfast when a messenger boy arrived on a wheel with a telegram. It was signed and a code from Fred Fenton addressed to Josephine and myself. While Josephine was reading it I felt which was addressed to me. I felt on the bundle of letters. I tore it apart and scanned the contents. For a full minute I was silent. Then pandemonium began.

The papers were full of startling news that bore directly on our case. They were also full of a lot about myself. I seemed to speak all the languages in the world. The headlines were in every kind of type. Even the Japanese and Chinese papers had their say. Each one was different from the other. Each one was different from the other. Each one was different from the other
