IN FORESTRY WEEK

True that the love of my presence Has made that path beyond the Willow leader, some wonder Within a man's heart, and nerve The growing stems of a
Where men have loved the woods
To grow, and men have loved
And right—
Aye, and we will that favored Place

Who foresees grand the pleasant
Use

Is not in the hand that he Within the hills where forest are
And men are taught to love them.

Henry Edison Williams

THIS, THAT AND OTHER

A Page From The Diary
Of A Country Editor

Lay late, and hazy, there came A morning when the sun Down, from and north, and
The day itself was so
And I had time to think Of things that had not drumming in and knew that I was becoming old, and and I was in the habit of thinking, not only of myself, but of the people around me, and of the things that were going on in the world around me. I was in the habit of thinking, not only of myself, but of the people around me,
and of the things that were going on in the world around me.

By the way, 'Jack,' my neighbor, has arrived; 'Jim,' his brother, has just come; and 'Mary,' his sister, is on her way.
I am glad to hear of them, but I am sorry that they are not here
yet. I wish they were.
I wish they were here
now. I wish they were here now. I wish they were here now. I wish
they were here now.

'Old friends are best,' King James used to tell for his and his friends. I wish my friends were here now.
I wish they were here
now. I wish they were
they were here now.

All of this talk, and more and more, has had its effect on my mind. I feel that I am becoming
old. I feel that I am becoming old. I feel that I am becoming old. I feel that I am becoming
old. I feel that I am
becoming old. I feel that I am becoming old.

There is something beautiful about the business of my neighbor. I like to see him do his work. I like to see him do his work.
I like to see him do his work. I like to see him do his work. I like to see him do his work.

GOODYEAR

If There Was Anything Better
We Would Get It

We want you to get our customers the very best possible for their money, and we are conscientious in believing that we do this when we sell them GOODYEAR Tires.

A GOODYEAR All Weather Tread will last the average farmer nearly two years, while a cheap tire will last but a few months—half the time of the other. The cheap tire will cost at least three-fourths of the price of the good one, so how can you figure anything but a loss by buying a cheap one?

If you want a low price tire, we have the Pat-finder, made by GOODYEAR, as good a value as you can find on earth.

REMEMBER our prices mean money saved to you.
