WHY NULLIFY THIS SECTION OF OUR CONSTITUTION?

The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the Members of the several State Legislatures, and all executive and judicial Officers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by Oath or Affirmation, to support this Constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a Qualification to any Office or public Trust under the United States.

Those who listen to the whispers of hate; those who give ear to the stupid, silly talk of the domination of the Papal power are applying a religious test to the Democratic candidate for the presidency. Inasmuch as they apply such a test, they do nullify a section of the Constitution of the United States.

Why are they inconsistent? This writer has not forgotten the tears of the mothers, the prayers of the mothers, the heartaches, the sacrifices of 1918, when the flower of our young manhood answered their country's call. Did a single one of those who now fear to entrust the leadership of this nation to a man proven able, proven honest, proven clean, but a Catholic, cry out in protest, as the lads swung through our streets to eptrain for camp: "Don't let that go to fight for his country; he's a Catholic!" or did that theory silent? No, they cheered to the echo, Catholic and Protestant, both true American boys, both patriots, both acknowledging allegiance to but one flag and one country. Is it, then, well that the youth of a Christian faith shall die for their country, but useless for them to expect honors or hope for offices of trust at the hands of their countrymen? Be fair with yourself in answering that question.

Why do those who apply the religious test now the seeds of a dangerous precedent? Because, in their intolerance, they admit that it is well to combine church and State, if the church be of their faith. Toward a sect that worships the same God and acknowledges the divinity of the same Savior that all Christians worship and acknowledge they show a distrust, an intolerance, so hatred that is unworthy of the spirit of love preached by Jesus of Nazareth. To a younger generation, wiser than any other, in this amazing age of progress, questionings are not confined to be materialistic, what seeds are sown by the spectacle of those, who while declaring their faith in the teachings of brotherly love that Christ preached, distrust, fear, hate a clean, capable, upright man, because the method in which he approaches his God in worship differs in ritualistic form from their own? Truly they sow the wind. Just as surely they shall reap the whirlwind.

WORTH CONSIDERING

A dispatch from Lawrenceburg says:

Twelve carloads of junk valued at close to $20,000 have been gathered up in Anderson county in recent months by Jim Beazey. Nine carloads were shipped last week and three carloads are ready for shipment.

The collection is composed of a motley assortment and includes rags, old iron, rubber, metals such as brass, copper, zinc and lead. Much of the material was collected by small boys who gathered these things in barrels and converted them into cash.

Nicholas county needs some $2,000 to clean up sporting room in the Johnson Memorial Hospital, so that the institution may be opened. One of our subscribers who is intensely interested in the welfare of the Nicholas county hospital, sends a reality, suggests that the needed funds might be raised through a public collection and sale of junk. The Mercury regards the suggestion as well worth the consideration of the hospital committee.

A junk week might be declared, during which very householder in the county would be expected to collect and sell to the junk dealer rubber, iron, zinc or lead about his premises. Business men of the town and county would, we are sure, donate the use of their trucks to haul the junk to the sale, from which place a sale could be made.

If Anderson county youngsters are able to gather $20,000 worth of junk during the year, intensive efforts on the part of citizens of Nicholas county should result in gathering together enough cast-off material in a week to assist in a like cause. Nicholas county and Anderson county have approximately the same population. Doubtless the number of junk possessed would be in the same proportion.

The idea, though unusual is worth considering.

COMPENSATIONS OF AUTUMN

Some have ment and canne eat;
And some have not that want it;
But I like best what I can eat—
So let the Lord be thankit.

The fields have grown silent early this year. The hearty frost of last week brought a premature doom to the early crops. The high-pitched chattering of the little fellows ceased suddenly at the touch of the icy finger of a night that etchless sing on. Winter will take no such upon us this year with rude viciousness, though far be it from this newspaper to attempt weather prophecy.

Hooray! Time was when the whirl dervishes of an early fall brought a rest for the chance of seasons. Can it be son can wonders, that sets one thinking of orange groves and sunswept beaches, ere "chill November's surly blast" lays bare forest and field and sends the feathered folk drifting southerly southward?

And yet there are compensations of sorts, which surly November brings, even in the year of a presidential election. For no matter who is elected, nor how cold the blast, 'tis always fair weather to folk who eat in the kitchen of winter, to the hum of a teakettle and the frizzle of fat sausages. Not forgetting sooty hominy, either, our sparerib, and remembering ever the delectable pastime of attempting to make hot biscuits, well buttered, and golden sorghum "come out even."

Hearken, ye sidesers! of whatever party you may be that is to be disappointed on the sixth of November. All is not lost, so long as there is hog and hominy, golden sorghum and hot biscuits. Take two and butter 'em while they're hot!

HEAR BOTH SIDES

No matter how prejudiced you may be, it is well to hear both sides of any question. Especially is that true in the case of the Democratic candidate for the presidency, more than any other candidate in the history of this nation, perhaps, the victim of a campaign of misrepresentation.

You have doubtless heard that Governor Smith, if elected, will "bring back the saloon;" you have heard him maligned upon account of his religious belief; you have heard ardent appeals made to sectarian prejudice by excited speakers. We hope, therefore, that you will consent to read the following excerpts from the address, "Tolerance and Governor Smith," delivered by Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, former governor of Wyoming and always an advocate of the Prohibition amendment.

Mrs. Ross says:

I do not agree with those dry Democrats who believe that the election of Governor Smith assuming that the issue is made of prohibition, would be a triumph of the so-called "Wets," but on the other hand believe it would be a triumph for progressive principles in government. Indeed I have confidence that under him we would have better enforcement than we are now getting. He has both the courage and the resourcefulness to deal ably with the situation and the very fight that is being made against him would act as a challenge to him to employ the full limit of his power to correct it.> Nor do I think that so-called "Dry" organizations promote the cause of prohibition, when they protest militantly against Governor Smith's nomination, and then go to Washington as they did lately as a federated group, and formally indorse the conduct of the present administration with reference to enforcement of prohibition law or so at least it was reported and that in fact, too, of the late startling disclosures made in Collier's magazine by a former chief of the Federation Enforcement Department, involving well-known party leaders, and in fact, too, of that defarious traffic on the Canadian border that floods our states with bootleg liquor. The traffic, that according to late reports is of such magnitude as to stagger the imagination and against which the Canadian Government itself is crying out. "Consistency, thou art a jewel!"

Many of these indeed do not scruple to violate the law themselves, but they are not going to consent to letting down any bars that would extend that privilege indiscriminately. Both the economic and moral consideration enter into their reasoning. For myself I am a prohibitionist—if you know anything at all about me you know that from my record both official and personal I am opposed to a modification of the present law. Not because I am satisfied with present conditions, far from it. I have been traveling all over the country almost continuously for over a year and I know it is being outrageously violated in every part of the country, and yet I think that it has not been tested sufficiently long to demonstrate whether it is enforceable. If, ultimately, it is proven that it is a failure it is a great triumph for good Government. If not, and after a longer period of years it should be proven that it is not the remedy, we must deal with the problem anew and the people will be satisfied that it was necessary to do so.

While holding to this opinion I cannot denounce as unworthy citizens all those who differ from me and contend that the present law is not serving and never can serve the purpose for which its proponents intended it.

Then there is the opposition to Governor Smith on the grounds of his religious faith, which is equally absurd. The stumbling block to many who cannot place it under the yoke of prohibition. As a Protestant, I understand their viewpoint, though I do not share it. This fear of Hierarchy is a sincere one in the minds of many people. There are few who can define upon what it is based. They point to certain atrocities in past ages of which the Catholic Church was guilty. In past generations in the cause of Christianity we too burned witches at the stake, but we are not still doing it. However, Mexico Hill still stands there in flaming testimony to the shameful offenses of the past, and history records us that Roger Williams was driven from Massachusetts by the Puritans for his religious opinions, and Quakers were hanged there for no other offense than that they were Quakers.

I like many of you perhaps, was reared, under prejudices against the Catholic Church, but since I have come to do my own thinking and reading and observing I have decided that the much talked of peril of the papacy is a bugaboo, and if, either Governor Al Smith or should he be elected, the Pope should try to dictate anything to us, I am confidence in saying from the way the Catholic countries of Europe have dispossessed him of temporal power. But even if that were not true I have confidence that we have plenty of vigilant watch dogs in Congress and our Protestant people who would amply protect this government.

While we are demanding that our candidates uphold the Constitution, let us make certain that we are not ourselves nullificationists. Article 6 of the Constitution of the United States provides that "No religious test should ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States." That was the basic principle upon which this government was founded and the one that was most cherished by Thomas Jefferson, the founder of our party. If now the Party is going to repudiate that principle it should change its name.

I would rather see our party go down to defeat if need be, standing for religious freedom, than on to temporary triumph by abandonment of it, and I reiterate the statement made in Washington before the Democratic Club of women nearly a year ago that I think that now after one hundred and fifty years of National life it is time for the Nation to elect a well qualified Catholic to settle for all time that question of whether or not Catholics are eligible to all the privileges of citizenship as well as subject to all its obligations, taxation and even to laying down life itself, if need be, in defense of the country. In the late Great War, the fathers and mothers of the nation stood on the streets and with hearts in their throats and tears in their eyes, watched the splendid phalanxes of the country's finest young manhood march off to face an unknown fate—the Catholic boys along with the Protestants. That was their way of supporting Catholic boys in the sacrifice of shirking at the call of any true American in the side lines who could have entertained a doubt professed any such unworthy sentiment as this. "Five Catholic boys gave up their own lives to protect us left behind in the safety of our homes. But we don't come back from the war expecting any honors at the hands of your country?"

I denounce now as unworthy now in time of peace, the precious heritage of American citizenship and the sacrifice of the sacrifices of our heroes in all of the wars and policy my friends of peace that is based upon prejudice rather than justice.

A REPUBLICAN VIEW OF GOVERNOR SMITH

Charles Evans Hughes, great American and great Republican, had this to say of Governor Smith:

"He is one who represents to us the expert in government . . . and a master of the science of politics. He has led in highways and byways of the law, particularly of the statutory law . . . while we go hallooing and with much study he threads his path with perfect familiarity for so him the administration of government is not a study but a life. If he had the confidence of other countries, he would long ago have been elevated to the peerage . . . But we do better than that. He long since became a member of high distinction of the fine aristocracy of public service We have watched him, some of us carefully, all with fascination. The title that he holds is the proudest that any American can hold, because it is a title to the esteem and affection of his fellow citizens."

MRS. SOUTH'S EXTRAVAGANCE

(Elizabethtown News)

Mrs. Christine Bradley South, daughter of the late Governor Bradley, is one of the very ablest speakers of either sex in Kentucky. She made a splendid address for Governor Richard H. Lucas, the very best speech The News has ever heard. But the subject of race-track gambling and like-wise of the women a very possible addition of the present law. Not because I am satisfied with present conditions, far from it. I have been traveling all over the country almost continuously for over a year and I know it is being outrageously violated in every part of the country, and yet I think that it has not been tested sufficiently long to demonstrate whether it is enforceable. If, ultimately, it is proven that it is a failure it is a great triumph for good Government. OLD FAVORITES

OUT TO OLD AUNT MARY'S

(James Whitcomb Riley)

Wasn't it pleasant, O brother mine,
On those old days of the last sunshine
Of youth—when the Saturday's
Chores were through,
And the "Sunday's wood" in the Kitchen, too,
And we went visiting, "me and you,"
Out to old Aunt Mary's?

It all comes back so clear today!
Though I am as old as you are gray—
Out by the barg-lot, and down the Lane
We patter along in the dust again,
And stilt at the tips of the drops of
the rain,
Out to old Aunt Mary's

We cross the pasture and through the Wood,
Where the old gray snag of the poplar stood
Where the hammering "red-heads"
Hooped away,
And the buzzard "raised" in the
Clearing's way,
And lolled and circled, as we went by
Out to old Aunt Mary's

And let them in the dust of the road again,
And the beams we met, and the country-
Side,
And the sun high-way, with sunshine
Spread
As thick as butter on country bread,
Our cares behind, and our hearts
Ahead
Out to old Aunt Mary's

And the romps we took, in our glad
Delight,
Was it the lawn that we loved the best,
With its sweeping swing in the locust
Tree,
Or was it the grove, with its leafy
Breeze,
Or the dim hay-mow with its fragrancies—
Out to old Aunt Mary's?

Why, I see her now, in the open door
Where the little gourds grew up the Sides and over
The clapboard roof! And her face—ah, me!
Wasn't it good for a boy to see—
And wasn't it good for a boy to be
Out to old Aunt Mary's?

For, O my brother so far away,
This is to tell you—she waits today
To welcome us. Aunt Mary fell
Asleep this morning, whispering,
"Tell
The boys to come," . . . And all is well
Out to old Aunt Mary's

THE OTHER DAY

I was a poet the other day
When baby smiled at me,
For in his dancing, happy eyes
Heaven I could see.

I was a poet the other day,
For in his silken hair
The gold and red of sunsets
Danced in rhythm there.

I was a poet the other day,
Until my baby cried
And turned all red and squirmed and Kicked—
Just then a poet died!

Before you buy those tires you need come in and let us show you the GOODYEAR line, and give you prices. We can save you money.

MOST WEALTH ACQUIRED THROUGH THRIFT

By S. W. Straus, President American Society of Thrift

Reference frequently is made in newspapers and magazines to instances of spectacular success in acquiring wealth. Men are frequently credited with having amassed fortunes over night in the stock market, in the oil fields, in grain speculation, in real estate, as well as in other lines of activity.

It is not to be denied that these instances exist. The number of persons, however, who have been fortunate in the manner referred to is very small indeed, and the number who are steadily getting ahead in the world by slower and more dependable means. The vast majority of those who are prominent today are enjoying the results of patient, hard work. Only a negligible percentage of the total are acquiring wealth in a different manner.

It is well to have these facts emphasized in order that persons may not be swept away by occasional stories of meteoric success. Because some man now and then gets a very lucky break and acquires a fabulous sum of money in a short time, is not sufficient reason to believe that others can do the same thing. Thirty million or more people will vote for President this year. Do you know who have been our Presidents, how they were elected, what they did, why they are the best remembered? These games are great fun, and good Americanism. Young and old will enjoy and profit by them.

GAME NUMBER XXVI

2. Which President died in the Capitol at Washington?
3. Which President was wounded by an assassin while a candidate?
4. Which President was once wounded in a duel?
5. How many children had Lincoln?
6. What President was known, partly in derision, as "Unconditional Surrender"?
7. What President is known as the founder of the Democratic party?
8. What Vice President resigned during his term?
9. What President became a lawyer at the age of 21?
10. Name three similarities in the careers of William Henry Harrison and Zachary Taylor.

Answers to the question in Game Number XXVI will be found in another page.

These and hundreds of other questions about our Presidents are answered in a 40 page booklet, "Presidents of the United States," which the American Legion has arranged to have delivered to any reader for five CENTS to cover postage and handling cost. It contains the official portrait of every President, with history of his life, election and public services. Address, The Hanke Information Bureau, Washington, D. C., enclosing six cents in stamps.

TENNESSEE PAPER CARRIES PICTURE OF MONUMENT

The current issue of the Appalachian Journal, good roads publication published at Knoxville, Tenn., carried a picture of the Blue Licks Battle Monument and urged tourists to stop and see this monument and historic spot.

Situated on U. S. Highway No. 68, the Blue Lick Battlefield designated as State Park No. 5, should be one of the most prominent sites for tourists in Kentucky next summer.
