RIDES FOR CHILDREN

At nine o'clock this morning Nicholas county's annual free agricultural fair will open in the Growers warehouse on East Main street for what promises to be the most successful fair ever held in Carlisle.

Farmers throughout the county are cooperating with the business men and citizens of Carlisle in making this an event worth while.

The displays of all kinds of products at our fair will be as fine as at any county fair in the state, and the premium list offers a wide variety of exhibits.

An added attraction for the fair this year will be the merry-go-round and ferris wheel for the children and those persons who still get a thrill from these rides.

A splendid twenty-piece brass band will furnish music for the three days of the fair, and there will be other attractions throughout the three days.

Nicholas Post No. 17, American Legion, will have charge of the refreshment stand, and profits will be divided between the Legion and the fair committee.

All judges of the various classes are specialists in their line. From the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky, some of whom have been here before and are well known to Nicholas county people. Judges of the various classes assigned to the fair committee are Poultry, J. H. Smythe; field crops and vegetables, Ralph Rodney; live stock, Weyland Rhoads; women's activities, Miss Mary May Miller.

In order to avoid confusion when exhibits are returned this year, exhibitors will be given duplicate tickets when their property is received. Before the exhibits will be returned the duplicate ticket must be given to the superintendent of the department.

To make the fair a complete success, exhibitors should cooperate in every way with the fair committee. Exhibits must be left on display until Saturday afternoon. They are received under these conditions and whether awarded a prize or not must be left.

One of the principal features of the fair week will be the old fiddlers' contest in the circuit court room Saturday night. Tickets for this event will be sold during the fair, and proceeds will be used in helping to pay the band.

As a final word to citizens of Nicholas county The Mercury urges you to attend the fair. It is your fair, and if you abuse, may benefit from it. The persons interested in the promotion of the event give their time and no one receives any financial reward for it.

HUNG JURY IN SHANKS TRIAL

Nine For Acquittal Of Former State Auditor, Charged With Misappropriation Of Funds

Unable to reach a decision after five hours deliberation, the jury in the case of W. H. Shanks, former state auditor, charged with misappropriation of state funds, was dismissed by Circuit Judge Ben G. Williamson at the Franklin circuit court at Frankfort 9 o'clock Saturday night, that started two weeks before.

The vote of the jury was three for conviction and nine for acquittal. Mr. Shanks will be given another trial at the January term of the Franklin circuit court.

The commonwealth contends that Mr. Shanks misappropriated $12,698.28 of the state's money while he was in office, and a full view of the case by more than one year or more than ten years in the penitentiary.

The trial of Mr. Shanks' cousin, Joe T. Embry, on a charge of regularly receiving state funds, was postponed until the January term.

COLDEST SEPTEMBER 24 IN RECORDS

The lowest temperature on record in this section on September 24 was experienced Monday morning when the mercury dropped to 36 degrees. Early Monday morning ice was reported on containers exposed to the weather. The drop in temperature started Sunday afternoon and free were started in stoves.

The sudden drop in temperature brought with it a heavy frost, which did considerable damage to late tobacco, beans, sweet potatoes, late Irish potatoes and late corn were the most seriously affected, although some tobacco remained uncut and was damaged.

The cold wave continued until Tuesday since when the mercury has gradually risen, and tonight the weather is forecast for the remainder of the week.

Many beautiful flowers, left outside, were destroyed or ruined by the frost. This will probably walk out down the exhibits of flowers at the fair.

FLORIDA TOLL IS BELIEVED TO BE 800

Red Cross Asks Five Million Dollars To Aid Sufferers In Hurricane Stricken Areas

Between 800 and 1,000 persons lost their lives in the hurricane which swept easter in southern Florida, it was revealed when the wrecks waters receded and surrendered the bodies of the victims. Hundreds of other persons were injured, and it is feared that pestilence diseases will break out in the water-soaked, wind-whipped area.

The greatest damage and loss of life was around the Lake Okeechobee section. All but a few of the scattered inhabitants of the Lake Okeechobee were killed.

Identification of many bodies was impossible because of decomposition. In order to speed up the work of clearing the wreckage, national guardsmen, called in to bury the bodies, buried a large number of negroes in mass trenches.

The American Red Cross Friday called upon the people of this country to give five million dollars to aid in hurricane-stricken Florida, Porto Rico and Virgin Islands—the largest amount ever asked since the great Mississippi flood. Telegraphing to local chapters of the organization throughout the country, Chairman John Barton Payne declared that "the human heart will go out to the people of your community realize the grave need. The response will be immediate and generous."

The sum of $5,000,000 among the largest single peace-time appeals ever made, was agreed upon when the surveys showed relief and rehabilitation needs exceed the preliminary estimates.

MRS. J. C. OGDEN DESCRIBES LIFE IN TIBET AND ARDUOUS TRIP TO UNITED STATES

Sunday's Lexington Herald carried a very interesting interview of Mrs. James C. Ogden, native of this county, who arrived in Lexington last week from Tibet. Mrs. Ogden and children will spend the winter in Lexington with this county, and her husband, Rev. James C. Ogden, who is pastor of the Lexington Wednesday from Ba Tang, Tibet, where Mrs. Ogden and her children and children, practically alone and almost cut from the outside world, spent 20 years of their lives in an effort to bring the Blessage of Christianity to people who have remained untouched by centuries of civilization.

Mrs. Ogden is the home of Dr. John W. Hardy, on North Broadway, told the writer about the journey homeward started May 26, about the Tibetans, their marriage ceremonies, their lives and deaths, and the work of the little band of missionaries laboring far away from their homes.

Four months ago the Ogden family left the nine acre compound which has been their home for 20 years and started across the world to Lexington.

For 20 days of continuous travel the journey was made by horseback, skirting the mountains on paths made so slippery by the clouds of the 16,000 foot level. The only provision for luxury on this stage of the journey was the addition of a sedan chair to be used in case of sickness.

The thirtieth day of travel found the party at Yatung on board a bamboo raft. Soon the swiftness of the river they were following made this method of conveyance safer, and a rude form of native boat was resorted to for another two day period.

Then, after more than a month spent on the journey, the first outpost of civilization was found, in war-scarred China. Here the trip was resumed by Chinese steamer. Then a British boat was boarded two days later which carried the family to Shanghai.

In Tibet, Mrs. Ogden said they spent 13 days in waiting for a steamer to bring them across the Pacific to California. Here Mr. Ogden stopped to visit relatives in Los Angeles, and Mrs. Ogden and her children continued on to Lexington.

The Ogden family first went to Tibet 20 years ago. In the time that has elapsed they have built a mission compound at Ba Tang grow from almost nothing to its present well equipped status. An orphanage accommodating 84 children, a day school for the children, a hospital, a church, and several homes, in addition to the planted fields in which fruits and vegetables are grown, all this has been the result of constant hard work by this handful of missionaries.

The Tibetians did not even know about cultivated fruits and vegetables until the missionaries introduced them into the community. Fruit seeds and plants shipped from the United States were grown for seed, and distributed among the natives. Potatoes and other vegetables were introduced in this manner. The Tibetians welcomed the chance to vary their diet of grain, and clamored for the new delicacies.

Mrs. Ogden told of having seen a native wedding, held at 1:30 o'clock in the morning to limit his attendance. The bride, Mrs. Ogden said, was brought to the home of the groom with her face and head covered by a red silk scarf. She entered the kitchen, where she kotowed to the groom's mother three times, then clasped hands. Then the couple kotowed and pronounced them married. Following this ceremony, a wedding feast was partaken of by the guests, which lasted for the next two days.

The bride always remains at the home of her parents for a month or so after marriage, Mrs. Ogden said, and then when the groom gives a feast in her honor, she goes to live with him.

Although the natives are usually quite friendly, Mrs. Ogden said, an attack was made April 8 upon the native compound. An immediate investigation showed that the hospital had been entered. As the robbers left, Mrs. Ogden said they indulged in a gun fight with the watchmen, and the forces suffered wounds. One of the robbers was captured.

After a trial, the man was beheaded in the customary manner, Mrs. Ogden said, in this manner must a man killed in battle be executed, according to native headlines. All Tibetian executions are performed in this manner, although in the Chinese allow their condemned the privilege of being shot.

Robbers, when caught, are subjected to many tortures to wrest from them the names of their accomplices and the hiding place of their loot. Mrs. Ogden cited as an example of this the case of the man who was caught after having entered the compound. He was tortured until he revealed the name of a benefactor, who was also beheaded along with the robber.

The dead in Tibet are either thrown into the river, burned, or cut into small pieces for the vultures to devour.

Sickness is supposedly kept from the natives by the wearing of charm boxes around the neck. These charms are given their power by having had the grand Llama of Tibet blow his breath into them.

In the spring, the Tibetian men plow the land with wooden sticks drawn by yaks, a beast of burden. Having performed this task, their part in the cultivation ceases, and the women are left to perform the remainder of the labor. The men travel into the mountains to round the wild animals with their queer guns, which are embedded with Chinese matches.

The hides of the animals are brought home to cure. After they are cured, the men fashion clothing out of them. Each garment is made very long, and wrapped with a draw-string at the waist. At night, the string is loosened, and the native lies down to sleep in a nightgown.

Great strides have been made in the evangelizing of these people, Mrs. Ogden said, and the most of it has been made because no attempt has been made to Americanize the community. The missionaries accepted the traditions and customs of the race, instead of substituting for them those of another people.

MAN AND WIFE HELD ON MURDER CHARGES

A blood-stained shirt found Friday led to the arrest of Garland Martin and his wife Mrs. Mildred Martin, on a charge of committing with the late William Parris, 35 years old, to murder Jesse Parrish Hiner, 40, of Cincinnati, whose body was discovered in a shallow basement-grave near Mendenville, Hart county Monday.

With the arrest of these two persons came the announcement from County Attorney C. B. Larimore that evidence tending to prove that Parris, whose body, with a shotgun lying beside it, was found 24 hours before that of Miss Kirchner, also had been murdered.

The bloody shirt was found covered up on the porch of the Martin home. Parris was unable to explain the presence of the shirt for how the blood spots came to be on it. Both he and his wife denied having any connection with the murder of Miss Kirchner.

TO RUN WALNUT PLANT

Firm Announces That Factory Will Again Be Operated

Hardy Myers, member of the firm of Myers, Lambert & Wilson, operators of the Carlisle walnut factory, stated to The Mercury Monday that the walnut plant will again be operated this year.

Started two years ago as an experiment, the plant the first year barely made expenses, but last year was fairly profitable, in addition to furnishing employment to a large number of people, Mr. Myers said.

The plant has a ready market for all walnut kernels produced, Mr. Myers said. He stated that bulletins pointed to a short crop this year, but the firm hopes to purchase three or four carloads.

The sale of walnuts brings in a revenue for a farm product which until recent years was practically without a market. In addition to the payment of several hundred dollars to farmers for the nuts, the plant here gives employment to approximately fifty people during the winter months.
