"The Store That Is Always Busy"

KEEPING FIT IN WINTER

By Zella Wigent, Agricultural Extension Departmental International Harvester Company

In winter our out-of-door work lets up a bit and we shut ourselves more and more in our homes.

We have butchered or we kill game and there is an abundance of meat and often a scarcity of fresh vegetables.

We women folks have more time to fuss with our meals. Christmas and New Year arrive and we busy ourselves with holiday goodies.

We eat three square meals a day and often don't get enough honest-to-goodness fresh air to burn up the food we consume or enough exercise to expel the poisonous wastes that collect.

Our systems become clogged and we are easy victims of the cold, sore throat and pneumonia germs that are always lurking around in search of a suitable home.

Ninety per cent of our ailments can be prevented by right living habits. Outside of accidents, infections, and organic diseases our illnesses come from bad habits. Bad habits can't be corrected with medicine. Bad habits must be corrected by good habits.

Health is more than not being sick. It is not enough for us to just keep well, to be up and around, to eat three meals daily, to drag on with our work and not have to call a doctor. We need the kind of health that baffles disease germs, gives us vim and vigor and enthusiasm, makes life worth living, work easy, play invigorating, rest relaxing and sleep sound and undisturbed.

Health is the foundation of success—it is half of that intangible thing called personality. To be healthy is normal. Let us get the fundamental health principles in mind and then translate them into habits until we act upon them automatically. Let us will to be well—just wishing won't get us very far.

HINTS TO FARMERS

In selecting a livestock are there are three main considerations to keep in mind, the individuality of the animal, his pedigree, and the performance of his progeny. The record of the progeny is the most important consideration, particularly in choosing a dairy sire.

The system of feeding sheep that is most economical and most likely to keep the flock in good condition is one which provides frequent changes of good pastures and grazing crops, and winter rations mainly of good leguminous hays, with some succulent feeds. Grain should be held for feeding in winter and after the lambs are born until good pasture is available. One hundred pounds of grain in a year for one ewe and her lambs is about all that can be used profitably.

No dairy herd is well managed unless a fairly accurate account is kept of the quantity of feed consumed. A convenient and practical way to feed the grain is to use a cart, with feeding charts or cards showing the amount of feed for each cow. A small blackboard can be attached to the cart and the figures chalked on the board every two or three days. A spring balance scale suspended above the cart on an arm is of great help. If the allowance of silage and hay is weighed occasionally, the quantity can be measured with reasonable accuracy.

Painting at regular intervals is the cheapest way to keep buildings and farm implements in good condition. New wooden buildings should have a priming coat of paint as soon as possible and two additional coats within the next month or two. Tinned roofing should be painted right after it has been laid. Galvanized sheet iron may be allowed to weather for a year to give paint a better hold. Both wooden and metal parts of machinery and implements should be painted before being exposed to dampness. The best time to do outside painting is when the temperature is between 60 degrees and 80 degrees F. and the weather is not damp, frosty or freezing. Cool dry weather is best for calcimining.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Columbia is the only South American country that touches both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

The chief cause of hay fever is pollen from certain plants, ragweed being one of the principal offenders.

The largest and most economically useful deposits of aluminum ore in the United States are in Arkansas.

Danish archaeologists are excavating at Hjalsh, hoping to find the site of the ancient Israelite tabernacle.

Monkeys in Africa play with crocodile eggs that they find in the sand, very much as a cat plays with a ball.

Dairy farming has forward one of the south's leading cotton strongholds, eastern Texas.

THE VOICE OF THE CHRISTMAS SEAL

Station KTA. Time, the Eve of the 1929 Christmas Seal sale. Place, all Kentucky.

"This is the Christmas Seal announcing and I bring to all a message of good health, a plea to restore sound bodies to the victims of tuberculosis.

I, the Christmas seal, bring good smile come back and the color to the smile come back an dthe color to the cheek of a sick child. The good I do depends on you.

And now while we wait for more returns we will read a telegram:

"$100,000 is needed in Kentucky to win the tuberculosis fight which is only one-half over. Buy more seals." Signed Kentucky Tuberculosis Association and its affiliated county associations.

We know that this appeal will not go unheeded.

I, the Christmas seal, "Do not intend to quit my job until tuberculosis is no more, and I am a candidate in the 22nd annual seal sale race for good health."

In soliciting your patronage I promise to "Carry on" my past record and will wage a winning fight against tuberculosis.

Promote good health in schools, place more nurses, arrange more chest clinics, teach people to go to their doctor for a health examination.

Aid in every community with health literature, lectures, movies, slides, exhibits and posters. Will work 24 hours each day, 365 days each year, for the protection of you and yours against tuberculosis.

On the records of Kentucky will be written no achievement that lies closer to the welfare and happiness of its people than the work of the penny Christmas seal. I thank you.

Station KTA signing off. All for health, health for all.

GUESS THEIR NATIONALITY

The father who punished his son for dreaming that he had lost a penny. The lassie who would have only one chair in the parlor when her sweetie called.

The man who bought postage stamps one at a time because he didn't want to tie all his money up.

The radio fan who turns on his set during electrical storms in the hope of getting his batteries recharged.

The man who has the creases sewed in the trousers of his new suit.

The author who hoped all his children would be girls so he could find a use for his old typewriter ribbons.

The man who consulted the weather bureau before taking a bath.

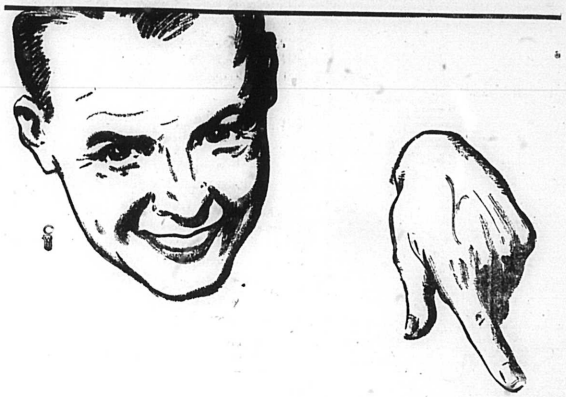
WELCOME, GROWERS!



—to the CARLISLE MARKET

The citizens of Nicholas county and the citizens of Carlisle welcome you to our tobacco market, which opens today. That it will be a good market is our staunch belief, because it is a logical market, logically located in one of the best white burley growing sections of Kentucky.

Carlisle has three modern warehouses, a re-drying plant and an immense storage warehouse. The light is good in every house; there is ample room for unloading and the seller may be assured that his absolute satisfaction is the first and last thing that will be considered.

Carlisle has never slumped below other markets in prices obtained for tobacco sold here over loose leaf floors. At one time occupying the position of third largest white burley market in Kentucky, it has always maintained a high level of prices and satisfaction to the grower.

Be assured that you will be welcome to the Nicholas county market; that you will receive courteous attention, whether your crop is big or little and that YOUR SATISFACTION as to price received and treatment accorded you is the goal of every citizen of Carlisle and Nicholas county.
