FREE BOOK SERVICE FOR ALL KENTUCKIANS

The Kentucky Library Commission is a State Department that serves the State thusly: It lends books free to those without local library service. Thousands of people are registered here and more are to be put in use in every county in the state. Anyone may borrow a book or several books. The Commission and the time may be extended upon request. A family or club may borrow as many as ten books or volumes for use by the various members, the privilege of renewal being given if desired. The only cost to the borrower is the carriage and return. Federal regulations make parcel post charges to and from the Commission rather exceedingly low. The rate is three cents for the first pound and one cent for each additional pound or fraction of a pound.

In addition to this individual service the Commission lends traveling libraries to schools, towns and associations. A traveling library is made up of fifty volumes from a collection of non-fiction and fiction modern, standard and classical literature and are for general community reading, farmers' clubs, schools and associations. The libraries for the schools, the Boy Scout organizations and the 4-H Clubs are selected with special collections are for supplementary reading in the graded schools and high schools. The humanities and science books are for the non-selection. The cost to the borrower is for the use of fifty books for three to six months is a fee of $2.00, part of postage on transportation. The Commission pays freight charges in each area of this amount.

Kentuckians are invited to take advantage of the free library service offered by the State. Apply to Fannie C. Rowan, Secretary, Kentucky Library Commission for circulars of information and registration card.

CROP AREA EXPANSION SLOWER

After a decrease of 13,000,000 acres in the crop area of the United States between 1919 and 1924, an increase was registered in 1926 and again in 1928 and the acreage in crops is now back nearly to the 1919 peak.

Nevertheless, it is very unlikely, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, that there will be as rapid an increase in the area of crops land in the next half century as in the half century preceding the World War II. That period, explained the crop area was the principal means by which agricultural production in the United States was increased. In the next half century the needs of a less rapidly increasing population will be met largely by other means, notably by increased efficiency in the use of land and in the production of meat and milk per unit of feedstuffs consumed.

Science and invention applied to agriculture have provided more food and better food for an increasing population during the last decade than during the preceding period, without any increase in crop acreage. This may be considered as equivalent to the statement, though it is more probable that the per fruit of decreases of even land in some sections and increases in other sections will be a slow and irregular increase in crop acreage for the Nation as a whole lasting possibly for a century.

Forty per cent of the milk produced in the United States is made into butter.
