

What the Gray House Hid
The Mystery of a Hounded Manion

by Wyndham Murray

"When Tim Hasky, intent on a job, he was in the kitchen, but he had been in the house for some time before he had been seen by the neighbors. He had been seen by the neighbors, and he had been seen by the neighbors."

SELECTING YOUR HOME
WITH INTELLIGENCE

The most important consideration in building is the choice of a location. The cost of brick, cement, sand, etc., varies greatly according to the value of the property values in the neighborhood. The cost of the building site itself is also a factor. The value of the building site itself is also a factor.

It is essential to choose a location that is safe and healthy. The location should be in a well-drained area, and should be free from any kind of pollution. It is also important to choose a location that is convenient to public transportation and other amenities.

Another important factor is the climate of the location. The climate should be suitable for the type of building you are planning to construct. It is also important to choose a location that is free from any kind of natural hazards, such as floods or earthquakes.

The size of the building is also an important consideration. The size should be appropriate for the needs of the person or persons who will be using the building. It is also important to choose a location that is large enough to accommodate any future expansion of the building.

The cost of the building is another important factor. The cost should be within the budget of the person or persons who are building the building. It is also important to choose a location that is free from any kind of hidden costs, such as taxes or fees.

The quality of the building materials is also an important consideration. The materials should be of good quality and should be suitable for the climate of the location. It is also important to choose a location that is free from any kind of hidden costs, such as taxes or fees.

The location of the building is also an important consideration. The location should be in a well-drained area, and should be free from any kind of pollution. It is also important to choose a location that is convenient to public transportation and other amenities.

What Happens To Your Highways In The Spring?

Early spring months are bad for highway travelers - except where the roads are paved with concrete. Freezing and thawing softens the soil. Spring rains, and melting snow, turn every ditch into a torrent. It's out of the question to keep the roads dry.

During certain weeks of March and April, some states prohibit passenger buses and motor trucks from using highways surfaced with crushed stone and gravel. They have to do it to keep their roads from being torn to pieces.

No embargoes are ever placed on travel over concrete roads. The strong, thick slab of rigid concrete distributes the pressure of heavy wheels over so much of the underlying soil that its load-bearing capacity is never exceeded.

That's why it pays to build durable concrete pavements on the main line highways. Traffic need never be stopped—because a concrete road is always ready for business!
