EYES OF POLITICIANS CENTERED ON THIRD DISTRICT ELECTION

The eyes of all politicians in Kentucky will be on the Ninth, as they are centered on the Third Congressional district, where an election will be held Saturday to elect a Congressman to fill the vacancy caused by the death of C. W. Ronak. Mr. Roark was swept into office by the Democratic landslide last November, defeating John W. Moore, the Democratic incumbent. Mr. Roark died before taking office.

Whether the political trend has returned to normal conditions or not is being eagerly watched. The Third district is one of the closest in the state, but has been carried by Democratic Congressman for several years.

Are You For

Kankakee OR Kentucky

Of Course You Are For Kentucky

But every sack of western flour you use you are helping to that extent to break down the market for soft winter wheat, one of the staple products of the Kentucky farmer.

Soft winter wheat, especially that grown in this section of the state, is the highest type of grain for bread making purposes, but when the Kentucky farmer can not afford to grow it in competition with the cheaper western grains the days of the renowned Kentucky biscuit will be a thing of the past and the farmer will have lost the production of the crop which has made those biscuits famous.

Moral: Stick to the bread, pastry and cake 'like mother used to make' and help your state, your county and your town, as well as your appetite for the best and most nutritious food obtainable—Soft Winter Wheat Flour.

Ask your grocer for soft wheat flour, or just say White Rose, and that is what you will get.

THE CHORISTERS

All the spring day long
The multitude of birds made song
In the purple elms
And the flowering bushes.
The little crocus voices rang
Ringing from the happy grass.
Then came momentary hushes.
When, gently, wing and feathered throat
Paused in rapt ecstasy.
Self-silenced in wonder at the sky,
The blue profound
With airy April clouds afloat;
Paused as though content
With the genius of the living firmament.
The kiss of sunshine, tangled hair of light.
That touched and caught
Twig and cupped leaf
In tender harness,
Until they trembled into loveliness.

But from that trough of silence,
That momentary calm of wave,
Bullen almost, as of summer noon,
The skylark sprang, admonishing
The feathered army, . . .
To sing rivalries, to sing
Spring and daylong morning.
Then from the flowering boughs there
Upraising from that rhythmic swoon,
The whole army of song
It rose and rang
From tree-height and thicket,
Into the green and blue of the sky.
Of the blue with a fullness of joy,
That was the signal of a boy
Tumbling out from home
To the green fields and the wicket.
