Making the Southland a Neighborhood

For many years the great distances that separated the grocery plantations and the scattered farms in the Southland isolated the western states from one another and from the rest of the world.

But no longer that South isolation. Today it has been placed in the nation's highway system and commerce. Modern transportation by rail, motor and air carries the products of our own lands and imports to all parts of the world.

As an important factor in this modern era of the telephone, what further impediment to early service around the corner, across the country, or across the Atlantic, you will find to serve you—promptly, efficiently, economically.
