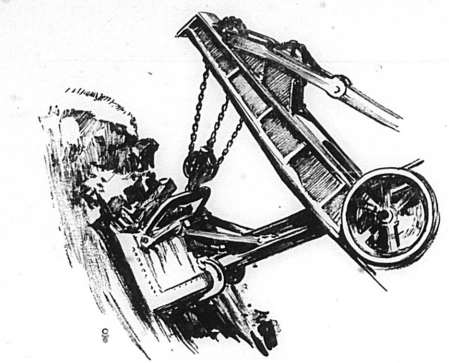
Continued Effort Will Accomplish The Goal



Watch a steam shovel working at a great hill. One shovelful at a time and at last the hill is gone, due to continued effort.

The same continued effort in community life will overcome what may seem insurmountable obstacles in the way of community betterment.

Keeping everlastingly at it--each and every member of the community doing his share of boosting and building--and success is assured.

Let us all dig in and do our share of this commendable work.

Our Interest In The Welfare Of This Community Prompts Us To Sponsor This Message To The People Of Carlisle And Vicinity.

NEW TOBACCO CIRCULAR

With the coming of spring thousands of farmers are preparing for a crop of tobacco. Already much seed has been sown in the plant beds. In Extension Circular No. 230 entitled, "The Production of White Burley Tobacco," the College of Agriculture has condensed the latest and best information available for the production of white burley tobacco. This circular gives information on the different steps necessary from the sowing of the seed until the crop is marketed. Among the outstanding things in this circular is the discussion of the use of fertilizers on white burley tobacco. Recommendations of the kind of fertilizer and the amount to use are given. The diseases affecting tobacco and their prevention and control are also discussed.

Every Home Without Electricity Made a BRIGHTER-BETTER PLACE TO LIVE with this new INSTANT LIGHT

Aladdin
Kerosene Mantle Lamp

Here's good news for all homes that use kerosene for lighting. This new Aladdin makes it possible for them to have light of even better quality than electric and at less cost. It is unsurpassed, brilliant and soft as moonlight—restful to the eyes. Entirely unlike ordinary oil lamps in a new genius.

This Modern White Light of a quality not to sunlight from kerosene is a modern miracle. Dingy rooms and dingy now made bright and cheerful. Over seven million people enjoy its comforts. Note the many desirable features.

FEATURES

Burns kerosene (coal oil). Lights instantly. Gives a modern white light of 300 candle power. Simple to operate. Burns 10½ hrs. The most economical of all lights. No odor, smoke, dirt or grease. Needs filling but once a month and a mantle once a week. Oil stores, tanks, lamps, burner, fixtures and mantles are guaranteed for one year by world's largest authority.

FLAMING YOUTH

(Editor J. M. Allen, in the Cynthiana Democrat.)

In a local restaurant, on the other night about eleven o'clock, were seated two girls about eighteen years old each and two young men, a little older. They came from the vicinity of Mt. Orab, Ohio. They were well enough behaved, but when they left after eating a hearty meal for four were so drunk they could scarcely walk. This is mentioned because it should be borne in these days of prohibition. I am wondering if such things happened before the eighteenth amendment was adopted; or if things were worse then with the "ladies' entrance" to saloons shunned on any account; or if the whole order of things has so changed and life has become so careless such occurrences are common; or what will become of the country. But, probably every generation has thought the passing generation the worst ever, and yet each generation is the product of some previous rising generation, the old world has waggled along pretty well and we have a rather fair sort of citizenship even now. Things right themselves when they get too bad to be endured. But it is not particularly pleasing to those of us about to retire from the scene of conflict to encounter flaming youth in quite so brilliant a blaze.

THE EARLY GARDEN INSECTS

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College Of Agriculture

Although earliness is extolled as a commendable quality, in birds, it is not so regarded in worms or in insects generally. The early insects do, however, serve to warn the gardener of the summerlong campaign that is to follow, and cause him to prepare.

The insects that may shortly be expected are the cabbage worm, the Colorado potato beetle, and the plant lice, or aphids.

The cabbage worm and the potato beetle feed on foliage. There is no guile or subtlety about them for they eat clear across the leaf on which they begin. This makes them easy to poison, but nothing short of poison will control them.

Two methods offer, that of spraying and that of applying the poison in dust form; the latter is to be preferred, in the case of cabbage.

Any of the arsenicals will do, but since calcium arsenate will be recommended for others of the vegetables, because of its freedom from leaf burning, and since calcium arsenate is adequate for any insect on any crop, it is recommended for cabbage and potatoes.

As a spray, it is used at the rate of 1 tablespoonful in a gallon of water. To apply it as a dust, it is mixed with hydrated lime at the rate of 1 pound to 6.

These persons who fear the danger of poisoning from dusting cabbage, will remember that cabbage grows from the inside, and that the outer leaves that receive the dust are removed when the cabbage is prepared.

The dusting or spraying should be done early before much leaf tissue is destroyed, for any loss of foliage has a stunting effect. The insects are most easily killed, too, while they are still small.

The plant lice, or aphids, are rather more difficult to control than the leaf eating class of insects. They do their damage by sinking their beaks into the plant tissue, and by sucking the juices they cause dwarfing and distortion and sometimes the total destruction of the plant. Arsenicals will not serve, but corrosive or choking sprays or dusts, to hit the aphids themselves, are needed.

Kerosene emulsion, properly prepared, is effective, but tobacco extract is better.

The most convenient way to supply tobacco is to use commercial nicotine sulphate, obtainable in most seed houses and drug stores. The directions for use are given on the container.

Home-made tobacco "tea" may be used as well. Its preparation is simply to steep trash tobacco in water, to make a well colored solution. Adding enough soap to make the spray slightly "sudsy" is of advantage.

Those who have dusters may use nicotine sulphate dust, obtainable wherever the liquid nicotine sulphate is sold. Tobacco kills by direct contact or by paralyzing the insect with the fumes set free. To obtain the best results it is suggested that spraying or dusting be done at midday, when the temperature is 60 degrees or higher.

As in the case of the leaf eating insects it is of advantage to begin control of the plant lice early, before the curling and twisting of the foliage has made them hard to reach.

NOTICE

This awertisement, under Section 2072 of the Kentucky Statutes (Carroll's Edition, 1915 and 1922), as amended by the Act of the General Assembly of Kentucky, Chapter 70 of the Acts of 1922, approved March 22, 1922, is to comply with the law and set forth the following: On the 16th day of April, 1927, by commitment order of the County Court (Juvenile Session) of Nicholas County, Kentucky, an infant named Sil Dora Soaby, of male sex, and two (2) years of age, was committed to said Society as a neglected and dependent child, and said Society will, in connection with said Section as amended, proceed in due course to consent to and consummate the adoption of said infant by an Adoptor and accord to such Adoptor the parental control of the Infant. This advertisement is inserted and published once a week for four weeks in The Mercury, a newspaper published in Nicholas County, Kentucky, and the newspaper prescribed by said Section as amended.

THE LEGISLATURE

(A. A. Bomar, in Woodford Sun)

When Lord Clive, one of the early British administrators in India, was called before a House of Commons committee, to answer charges of misuse of power, he burst out, "Sir, Mr. Chairman, at this moment I stand astonished at my own moderation!"

When the Democrats in the recent session of the Kentucky Legislature consider the absolute power which was placed in their hands by the change of front of the Sampson Democrats, who displayed the greatest hate for the governor whom they had once loved, a similar exclamation might be pardoned.

I despise that spirit of bitter partisanship which tries to injure a governor or a president, and to block every move he makes, simply because he is of the opposite party. I regard men who do this sort of thing as unworthy of citizenship in this great republic. But the bitter partisanship which was shown in the last session of the Legislature was chiefly directed toward ending the usurpation of power and wrongful acts of the governor of the state. Therefore, while I detest the spirit shown by some of the legislators, I cannot agree with denunciation of the "ripper bills."

The very sound of "ripper bills" is odious to me, and I was strongly opposed to them when they were first presented. But as the session advanced, I changed my mind. The revelations in regard to the State Highway department seemed to call to demand either the impeachment of the governor or removing power from his hands. Impeachment trials, like all other trials, are uncertain in result. To believe certain things is one thing. To prove them according to the rules of evidence is quite another. The passage of the ripper bills was practically certain. I do not agree with the Courier-Journal that it would have been better to "wait for the installation of a new administration" than to pass the highway ripper bill. To prevent the governor from wasting the enormous sum of $44,000,000 in highway money during the next two years was, it seems to me, quite unthinkable. His autocracy in regard to the textbook commission was almost as bad as in highway matters.

It is said that the partisan action of the Democrats will put them on the defensive in the next campaign. They will be very foolish if they permit the Republicans to monopolize the role of reformation. It is for the Republican party to apologize for giving the state a governor who usurped power, and who made such a record as a family suite all factions of the opposing party in the effort to prevent him from doing further mischief.

I am now, and never have been violently partisan. Over and over in the past I have paid tribute to the high character of many members of the Republican party in Kentucky. Many of the finest men we have in this state are Republicans. But it is for them to be mortified over the actions of their governor—made for conscientious Democrats to apologize because they had to participate in any practical movement by which he could be shorn of his power. The Democrats would have been just as strongly denounced had they had invoked Governor Sampson and removed him from office, as they have been, or will be, for passing the ripper bills.

The saving of Cumberland Falls and the presence of a law designed to preserve fair elections are two widely different things highly praised, and which will have real results long after the evils of the session of 1930 have been forgotten.

The worst fact on the record of the recent Legislature is its failure to provide for the relief of the state's charitable and penal institutions. In the Governor's report there a worse picture than I have ever drawn of the conditions in the penitentiary at Frankfort—was "the Black Hole of Kentucky" and that the conditions at the insane hospital at Lexington were as bad. The report is absolutely sickening. Yet the Legislature left it to the states to whether the sales tax should provide enough money to give relief. A deep, dark blot, in my opinion, is "damned spot," as exhibition of callousness that nothing can blot out.

The session seems to have had the usual proportion of "peanut politicians" (incapable of a noble thought) of men who were there purely to grind axes, of men actively bad, and more than the usual proportion of sincere, earnest men, who tried by working with the other elements as best they could, to bring about things that were right.

Taking it all in all, the session was not as bad as the average, nor as bad as I feared it would be. I could almost praise it if it had not been for the cold-hearted disregard of the helpless wards of the state in the insane hospitals. I cannot forgive that.
