ALONE IN SPRING

(Caroline Gilliam)

I never met the Spring alone before,
The flowers, birds, the loveliness of trees,
For with me always there was one I love
And love is shield against such gifts as these.
But now I am alone, alone, alone,
The days and nights are long and remembering
Did other Aprils that we shared possess
The hurting beauty of this living Spring?
I never met the Spring alone before:
My starving grief, this radiance of pain
To be alone, when Spring is being born.
One should be dead—
or suddenly grown old.

pastor with his family. As it stands at present we can assure only on about fifty percent of our members. Every one can be a member of a church and positively refuse to be guided in the affairs of life by the clear, and easily understood teachings of the New Testament, and if a man love me, he will keep my word" (John 14: 15, 21, 23). What does this say for the delinquent church members? Are they not recognized in the Scriptures; rather they are condemned and given a just reward.
