

This Is Our Creed

There has been a great deal said, written and broadcast recently about the "Old Home Town" and the necessity for its citizens to pull together and the larger cities and other large interests completely obliterate the individuality of the smaller towns and communities.

It is true that there is a growing tendency toward just such a development and it rests strictly with the citizens of the community, all interested in a material way, even though it may be small, to co-operate in such a way that these interests may be checked and that each county and its county seat town may continue as a prosperous unit.

Nobody wants to live in a dead community and no old established and historic county like Nicholas, and no town which has enjoyed the prosperity Carlisle has in the past, should yield to the tendency to make us suburbs of a distant city or to encourage the importation of goods or commodities which would be detrimental to the interest of our own farmers, merchants and industries.

Rather should we all work in harmony and through the spirit of real co-operation build up the community in a way which will encourage its business interests by loyal support and aid all civic, social and educational enterprises with a vision of a future which will make us glad that we have had a part in it.

This is the creed of
