Kentucky Has Tree That Owns Itself

Kentucky has the only tree in the United States that owns itself. This fact has just developed after a controversy which arose about the tree, which is located at Pippapass, Ky., was published in the November issue of Kentucky Progress Magazine. Comments on the magazine article were made by the New York Times and several other prominent newspapers of the country.

Prior to the discovery of the Kentucky tree, the city of Altoona, Germany, claimed the distinction of having the only tree self-owned in America. The Altoona tree, it is now reported, is not completely free from the tax-collector while Kentucky's tree is.

DISCUSSES WINTER FEEDING

Silos are being considered by many farmers in this section as a good preventive thought to ways whereby they may increase their farm profits. Silage has been found an economical feed for practically all livestock. Tests made at the kinds of livestock at the University Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky indicate that corn silage greatly reduces the cost of winter feeding cattle, according to a report which discusses many phases of winter feeding cattle.

LIGHT HOGS BEST

The tendency is to butcher light hogs, even on farms where time and feed are no objects. The excess of fat and the wastefulness of the meat in reality make large hogs unprofitable. The 200 to 225 pound hog, the University of Kentucky, recommends for medium sized hogs, weighing not more than 300 pounds, while the ideal weight is even less.

SOMEWHERE IN NICHOLAS

(By J. W. Rogers)

Fun is better than physics. I'll take the fun, you may have the physics.

"A little nonsense now and then, Is relished by the best of men."

"A laugh is worth a hundred groans in any state of the market." Gloomy days of sell will fill, if you don't sit wit and grit, just to laugh a little bit.

"Just to be happy is a fine thing to do; looking on the bright side rather than the blue.

This is a wonderful world we live in, and to spend, to speak, to give, to; but to borrow and loan, and get your self in debt is the sad old world that ever was known.

"The melancholy days have come, the saddest of the year; when drizzling rain is pouring in, and Christmas drawing near."—Bailey. Tobacco market days have come, the gladdest of the year; when prices good, are pouring in, and Christmas drawing near.

Our latest story:—"A traveling man picked up a young fellow on the road. The young man bumped heavily against him as the car took a sharp turn, and a few minutes later, the car driver felt for his watch and found that it was gone. Watching a chance he slipped a coin from the side pocket, and drawing it on the young man, said, "Give me that watch." The young man did so and was knocked from the car. When the traveling man reached home, he told his wife about the incident. She exclaimed, "Why, John, you left your watch on the dresser this morning."

Present Sheriffs To Lose License Fee On Dog Tags

Sheriffs now in office are not entitled to a 15-cent fee for issuing a dog license, the Court of Appeals held Tuesday reversing a judgment of the Logan Circuit Court.

Prior to June, 1930, during the present term of office of county officials, dog licenses were issued by the County Court Clerk, who received a 15-cent fee for each license issued. The duties were transferred to the Sheriff by an act of the 1930 General Assembly.

George C. Russell, Sheriff of Logan county, brought suit against Newton Bright, Commissioner of Agriculture, in charge of dog license collections, to determine the validity of the measure, arguing that the Sheriff now in office was entitled to the fee. The lower court sustained the contentions of Mr. Russell and Mr. Bright appealed.

The Appellate Court decision was based on the constitutional provision that an officer's salary can neither be increased nor diminished during his term of office.
