ONE OF 114 BABIES IN U. S. DIE IN FIRST YEAR

One out of every 12.6 babies born annually in the United States dies before reaching its first birthday, according to the Bureau of the American Research Foundation based on the latest statistics in the registration areas of this country.

Of 1,000,000 babies born in America every year an average of 116,118 die before the end of the first month," says a bulletin covering the survey. "The chief percentage of mortality among infants occurs during the first month of life. Deaths in the majority of cases are due to lack of proper care and to the fact that mothers make more mistakes in the first weeks of baby's life than in all the re-mainder of the first year."

IN THE LARK'S HOUSE

(Gaelic Proverb)

"There is no smoke in the lark's house."

No sniter of the burning peat,
But the soft green smoke of grasses,
And the gray wind cool and sweet,
And mist from the hens descending.
And spray from the distant shore
Wave slowly veils far fro the cover,
Low down on a peat-moss floor.

"there is no smoke in the lark's house."

And the air comes clean and fine
Over the shadowy hill tops
Where colors glimmer and shine;
And still are the dark loch waters,
And dewy the springing grass,
In the lingering gold of twilight
When the veil deer softly pass.

"There is no smoke in the lark's house."

The stir of the foaming seas,
Thundering in on the islands
Is faint on the fitful breeze;
And over her green-hemmed hoof—
The print of none
