COULD WE BUT KNOW

(Katherine Lee Bates)

Could Autumn look out through Winter And would his blessings be For every glad bud wasting A gold mist on the tree, For every bruise but flushing The forest with soft fire? Could Autumn look on Springtime And bless the year's desire?

Could Springtime look on Autumn Nor feel his chilling breath, More dearly for all he roses In those dim eyes and eyes? The dance of limbs bereaved of Green leaves where bird wings go, Brown drifts that seed still hollows, The promise of the snow?
