A Dirty Trick? but the victim WAS SATISFIED

It's all right to play a little trick on a perfectly good friend and this was done recently by one of our merchant customers.

He drove up to the mill with a few sacks of a certain brand of flour in his truck and said he had a few customers who would not use any other kind, but he wanted us to empty one of the sacks and fill it with WHITE ROSE.

He wanted to see if his friend could use White Rose under the name of his favorite brand. He marked the sack and gave it to his customer friend and when he had had time to try it out asked him how he liked the last sack of flour. He said IT WAS THE BEST SACK OF FLOUR HE HAD EVER USED.

When he returned for another sack he gave him his original favorite brand and he later complained that this flour was not running "regular" as the last sack he got was not near so good as the one before it.

This just makes us wonder if a lot of people are not turning down their home products and using something of foreign make under the false impression that they are getting something better. If you are using a foreign flour we cordially invite you to give your home product just a little consideration. Try a sack or two of WHITE ROSE and you may be convinced that it is "the best flour you ever used."
