SALTWELL

(U. G. Mattox, Correspondent)

T. R. Kendall left Monday for Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Joe Kenney and baby spent the past week with Lee Kellar and family.

Reynolds Gaines of Louisville is here some time, was at home for a few days.

Ray Paynter and family, of Middletown, Ohio, are visiting Roy F. Snapp and family.

Miss Virginia Smith, of Carlisle, visited Mrs. Annie and Myrtle Gaines a few days the past week.

Mrs. Rilla Woolford, of Lincoln county, attended the funeral of Mrs. S. D. Snapp and is visiting relatives here.

Hon. E. R. Kendall and family and Mary Hester Mattox spent Friday with Mrs. R. M. Lee and family at Burgin.

Mark Turley and family, of near Georgetown, Roger Pethock and family, of Headquarters, spent Sunday with Mrs. Susan Turley, who is resting very well at present.

Death has visited our community again, and claimed for its victim Mrs. S. D. Snapp. On last Wednesday afternoon her spirit departed this life. She was born in April, 1850, and was united in marriage to D. Snapp in 1865. To this union were born eight children, four have preceded her in death, viz: C. F. Snapp, Mrs. C. C. Hutchie, Mrs. Eddie Kellar and Jesse Snapp. Four sons survive her, viz: Mrs. Anna M. McElhiney, Mrs. John G. Allison and Mrs. Ford Barlow.

"Aunt Susan," as she was known, was always kind and was liked by all who knew her. Her home, it can be truthfully said, was a home by the side of the road, and she was a friend to all. Her life has been one of toil and labor. She has had the cares and burdens which were very heavy to bear, but in all this she never murmured or repined. She united with the Bakerell church early in life and continued church until the hand of affliction was laid upon her. Her husband, one brother, James M. Hartzyme and four children survive her besides a host of friends who mourn her loss. Her funeral was conducted by Rev. S. R. Mann at the Bakwell church Friday afternoon in the presence of a large crowd, after which her body was laid to rest in the family burying ground at Saltwell. 1t

THE BENEFITS OF CLERGY

"Just think, John, we don't have to pull down the shades; we're married now."

SOMEWHERE IN NICHOLAS

(By J. W. Rogers)

The following extracts from "All That's Kentucky," may be of interest to Mercury readers as Kentucky and Nicholas:

"Sweet rural scene, of flocks and herds,

"God might have made a better nation hospitable and more quarrelsome by he never did."

"The sun shines ever brightest in Kentucky; The breezes ever lightest Kentucky boys are the finest, clear, ever nightest, taxis are the highest in Kentucky.

"Other girls may have their graces, dreams, endless hair and all that; some may shine in silks and laces, or wear the latest Paris fad; but for one wife among all others, makes them all their banners fall; You'll agree with me my brethren, for her own Kentucky girl."

"What means that jealous, pressing throng that cheers so lustily, and long? Behold a champion, tried and true, the step, the dusty track, the whirling race? It's a horse race in Kentucky.

"It's up in old Kentucky, where every grass grows every second that prohibition damaging is feeling mighty near, where every crowed hopes it's cobwebs in his throat; and damns the prohibitionists, because they get his booze.

"Oh the splendor and the luxury in old Kentucky where the blue grass grows and the blue birds sing in the spring and the old sower charm, of a pretty girl in widow with a blue grass farm. If I though I couldn't win her, I'd hang myself; I'd head into the set tomorrow, with a blue grass rope.

"Kentucky hills are full of sun and all the rills are lined with stills, and all the stills are filled with joy and all the joys are full of thrills, and all the thrills are full of Kentucky girls and they make the stills, they'd carry Kentucky's many ills."

"Kentucky's day is ended, and life's struggles almost past; when this weary body to the earth is laid, my soul shall at last; May I once more turn to Kentucky, be born there, live my years; and lay me down to slumber in my old Kentucky home."

LONG HUSK PROTESTS CORN

Corn earworms are so common in Kentucky that most farmers do not consider it worth while to make efforts to fight them, but tests conducted by the United States, Department of Agriculture show that a crop of corn with tight husks suffer less than half as much injury as ears having loose husks.

Corn with long, tight husks are characteristic in some varieties, the department says, but there is enough variation in all varieties for a farmer interested in the matter to be able to select for seed ears with tight husks. In this way he can build up a strain having better husk characteristics.

Long tight husks are also good protection against insect pests of corn, such as the corn weevil, in sections where corn is stored in the ear. This is an additional reason for farmers to select seed corn in the field where they can give proper consideration to the type of husk.

THE HORSE COMES BACK

The day of the horses as motive power on the farm is far from being over. Some recent figures, compiled by the Missouri agricultural authorities show that for a great many kinds of farm work, wrath can be done by horses, but lately have been done by tractors. They show, also, that there are a great many places where a horse is now more economical to use horses.

On the other hand, race horses and saddle horses are more expensive than tractors, and the United States Army is finding it difficult to get enough good horses for cavalry remounts. Numerous sales of horses for this purpose have been made in the past few years. Even though gasoline is down, there are a great many places where a horse is now more economical to use horses.

On the other hand, race horses and saddle horses are more expensive than tractors, and the United States Army is finding it difficult to get enough good horses for cavalry remounts. Numerous sales of horses for this purpose have been made in the past few years.

There is still money in the horse. There is money for him in the breeding of the right kind of stock, and there is profit for the farmer who can raise a horse that will sell readily. Probably there never will be a time when people will not be willing to pay a real fancy price for a real horse, especially if it could or bills country boy or girl. Many people still like to ride a horse for the health-ride, but other people like to drive a horse for pleasure. There is nothing about a tractor to give the pleasure that comes from the companionship and character and other business one of the family.

CYNTHIANA NEGRO KILLED

Jesse Flavorse, 37, farmer who lived near Cynthiana, was shot dead in the head until Thomas Matthews, 46, negro, of Cynthiana, was charged with murder in connection with the shooting. Matthews, it is alleged, fired several shots into the automobile in which Flavorse was riding, after the two had engaged in a fight. Flavorse was shot in the head and died instantly. Matthews was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Ben Hall and Constable Ed Hall, and was taken to the county jail at Cynthiana.

HINTS TO FARMERS

Chemists of the U. S. Department of Agriculture have found that the greatest sweetpotatoes are a good source of the amino acids which are essential for the growth and nutrition of animals and which are lacking or deficient in the proteins of cereal seeds and grains. Sweetpotatoes would be a valuable supplement to correct the deficiencies of proteins of corn, wheat, grains in general, and some of the legume seeds such as the navy bean, lima bean, cowpea and lentil.

The potato leafhopper injures potatoes by feeding on the foliage and also causes hopperburn, a disease which sometimes in dry weather visits a whole potato crop in one or two weeks. Spraying with Bordeaux, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is the way to control the leafhopper and prevent hopperburn. The 4-4-50 formula is used most commonly. Make at least three applications and apply in a fourth time if necessary. Apply the spray to the undersides of the leaves with both sides of the row, using at least 150 pounds of pressure to obtain a fine mist.

Farmers who feed supplements to grain-fattened beef cattle are often undecided whether to feed the supplement throughout the grazing season or only during the latter part. The department says that the question depends principally on the care the cattle had the previous winter and on the quality and quantity of pasture available this year. The U. S. Department recommends that cattle be well wintered and not considerable grain is profitable. If they were finished through the winter on silage, dry roughages, and a little meal or cake, it is just as well to feed supplements only in the last 90 to 120 days of the grazing season, provided there is plenty of good pasture throughout the season.

MILDEW ON ROSES

Powdery mildew, a disease which usually attacks all roses at some time or other during the growing season, can be reduced by growing the somewhat resistant varieties such as Paul's Scarlet, Mary Wallace, Silver Moon, etc., among the others, and avoiding the very susceptible varieties like Crimson Rambler and Dorothy Perkins among the climbers, and Ophelia and Killarney among the hybrid teas.

Practice sanitation. Remove favorable conditions for growth, and treat the plants with fungicides. Sanitation includes the collection and burning of diseased leaves. A humid atmosphere and an accumulation of moisture favors the development of powdery mildew, and infection may occur as a result of too close planting or of planting climbing roses near buildings.

The best fungicide for home gardeners is a dust of 9 parts powdered sulphur and 1 part dry arsenate of lead. The applications of this dust should begin before the disease appears and must be repeated at regular intervals throughout the season, taking care to dust the under side of the leaves thoroughly.

REDPATH TICKETS PLACED ON SALE

Tickets Delivered To Guarantors Last Week And Are Now Being Sold

OPENS HERE JUNE 24

Season tickets for the Redpath Chautauqua, which opens here on June 24, were delivered last week and this week to the guarantors and they are now on sale.

The advertising for the chautauqua has been put up here and everything indicates that the annual event will be a success.

Redpath announces that this year they will offer two days, three at night and one in the afternoon. Mrs. Richard Lyons Sapp, Democratic Committeewoman, will be on the platform and will give a talk on the subject of faults and abounds in superlatives which culminate in a far from stereotypes ending "Her Husband's Wife." Senator Phillip Mackaye, who played the title role in the "Melody Man" will appear on the fifth night in one of the outstanding plays from Chautauqua. The play will be headed by Joseph Gifford, well known actor, in the title role. On the fourth afternoon will be presented the musical play, "The Violin Maker of Cremona." On the fourth night of Chautauqua Mrs. Richard Lyons Sapp will entertain. Dramatic readings will be presented by Miss Virginia Hall, one of the most singing ensembles ever to appear here, the Redpath Concert Artisan Singers will present the full program and it will prove an outstanding one. Ed Reno, the Magician, and Lora Forbes are scheduled placed on the program for the benefit of the Junior. The closing night of Chautauqua will be "Joy Night," and the Philharmonic Ensemble will give the full concert. This is a colorful organization not only playing classical and popular music but is a novelty act but the clever costumes and scenery used in presenting it make it a very standing program.

The Redpath people claim they are going to have the best balanced array of lectures they have ever given over the circuit.

The American Legion Auxiliary and the American Legion will both feel complimented in the fact that Colonel Wright Morrow, Past and Honorary President of the Filoc Auxiliary, will be here on the night of the Chautauqua.

Ray Hanson has been creating somewhat of a sensation with his lecturers "Chasing the Rainbow" and another and Charles H. Plattenburg is an entertainment authority on economics.

Man And Sister Drown In Herrington Lake

Frank Denton, 24, and his sister, Miss Ethel Denton, 18, of Somerset, were drowned in Herrington lake on Dix dam late in the afternoon when their motor boat capsized and they were thrown into the water. They tried to swim to shore Mr. Denton and his sister each almost exhausted by after jumping into the water, which is the first time either was an efficient oarsman.

Edwin Denton and his sister, Miss Mary A. Allen, also of Somerset, reached the bank of the lake and had short-circuited the 13,000-volt wires in the Dix Dam power station by attaching its tail to the steel frame of the automobile when they jumped out of the wires with the forepart of the car.

The snake completed an arc, George W. Howson, superintendent of power plant of the Kentucky Utilities Company in the Bluegrass said, that the short-circuit created a fire in the control house equipment and that the automatic oil circuit breakers at the power station.

Menace Of Army Worm Will Be Over Within Next Two Weeks

The army worm which is now laying waste to fields in central and southwestern Kentucky is doomed to "get it in the neck" in a few days from its own natural enemy, a parasitic fly.

Specimens of the yellow-and-black-striped worm, sent to W. J. Price, state entomologist, show a small egg deposited on the back of the worm. This egg develops into a grub which feeds on the worm, causing a fly to come from the worm.

Millions of these flies are allies of the farmers in their fight to repel an invasion of worms, Price declared. Reports from Logan county indicate that the worm is doing the most damage there, however, for the flies to destroy the pest.

Meanwhile farmers are resorting to trench and poison warfare in an effort to keep down the damage as much as possible. Digging dust furrows in the line of march and then dragging the furrows with a log has been found an effective defense. A poison bait is also being used.

"At the present stage of the flight, Prof. Price is unwilling to estimate the economic loss caused by army worms.

"Your guess is as good as mine," he remarked. "All that I can say now is that the loss can not be considered serious." He said that cut worms were general in the state and damaging crops.

Prof. Price said three broods of army worms benefit in a year. The first brood got the jump on their natural enemies, but after a few days of late spring. These enemies include the tachinid fly, the ichneumon fly, a dagger wasp, a wasp-like parasite, besides domestic fowls, skunks, toads and all species of wild birds of which the crow is one. The deadliest enemy is the parasitic fly, hatched late on account of the cold while the army worm, which, wintered in the larva stage in brush piles, began its 30 day cycle by emerging in May on schedule time.

The second generation is due the middle of this month and the third in August. But they will not infest fields in great numbers, Prof. Price

William Ray Sapp, 16 years old, son of Charles Sapp, of near Mayslick, was drowned Monday morning about 10 o'clock in Licking river near the store of S. K. Blandford's, two miles from Blue Lick.

Young Sapp was one of a party of members of the Mayslick Christian church which had been camping on Licking river for several days. Monday morning he, with five companions and three ministers returned to the camp to remain for several days. Sapp, his brother, Coaries Sapp and William Swartz, arrived in advance of the other members of the party and immediately went in swimming. Young Sapp swam across the river and was returning when he suddenly and suddenly called to his companions that he could not go further, and sank immediately. His brother and Swartz made frantic efforts to save him.

The body was recovered about an hour later by S. K. Standiford and Lawrence Sapp, who made a recovery.

Other members of the party were Rev. H. D. Woodruff, pastor of the Mayslick Christian church; Ewing Wall, pastor of the Mayslick Presbyterian church; Rev. Eugene May, pastor of the Antioch Christian church in Fayette county; Sam Taylor, Jesse Bolting and Allen Thomas, all of Mayslick.

Young Sapp is survived by his father, Charles Sapp; four brothers, Charlie John, George and Lawrence Sapp, and two sisters, Misses Frances and Anna Sapp, all of Mayslick.

Coroner H. R. Ewing was called to the scene and conducted an inquest after which the body was taken to the home of his father.
