PARDS

(Hugh J. Hughes)

So—good-by! The dreamy splendor of the morning,
Breaking over yonder range shall call you hence.
Dusk and dawn and night and noon be filled with yearning;
For the cattle-trail, the rough and the scence.

So—good-by! Before your face the East is lying.
Old and worn and haggard with its woes.
Ah you'll long to sit again a-saddle flush,
Past the dawn-dew, the odor of the rose.

When the mother calls, we question not, but answer;
And the open land is calling you, I know;
Sick above the dancers' music and the dancer,
You'll be hearing songs the East—men never knew—

Songs that prick their wordless music down the scurry
Nights we rode the range together, you and I;
Thoughts so fragile you would scarcely think they'd carry
Over all the days and miles that interlie!

There will come to you, like lovers, softly gliding
Into all your thousand doings and your dreams,
The campfire, the round-up, the riding,
The wolf's howl, the brawling of the streams.

So—good-by! Loose the bronco from his tether!
He'll be ready, and you'll want him by and by.
Twill be sunny heart and song, and weather
Where we ride the range together, you and I!

LAEGES

(Beatrice Bradshaw Brown)

How can love be a fairer thing
Than flowering fruit-tree in the spring?

A cloud of clustered pearl and gold
To every heart a heaven hold.
And yet as light as sound and air.
As pink as smiles, and as fair.

She stretches out her laden arms
And offers largess of her charms
To every vagrant passer-by.
To child and bird and cloud and sky.
And he who looks and he who takes
May keep forever what she makes.
Of beauty in his listening heart:
He holds no residue apart.

And this is strange: though day and night
She gives her scented self away
In beauty sunlit, showered, driven,
She gives—and keeps what she has given!

THE MORNING STARS SING

At an uncertain hour before dawn in February 1912, as I lay asleep in my room on the top floor of a hotel in the town of Mentone in Southern France, I was suddenly awakened by the morning star. It was shining with inquisitive splendor directly into my left eye. At that quiet moment, in the last stages of the dying night, the star seemed enormous. I hung out of the velvet sky so far that I thought it was going to fall, and I went out on the balcony of my room to see it drop. The air was windless and mild, and, instead of going back to bed, I decided to stay on the balcony and watch the unfolding drama of the dawn. For every cloud dawn in this spectacular universe is a magnificent drama, rising to a superb climax.

The morning stars sang together and I heard the sons of God shouting for joy. The chief morning star (the one that had roused me from slumber) recited a splendid prologue. Then, as the night faded and the lesser stars withdrew, some of the minor characters in the play began to appear and take their respective parts. The gray background turned red, then gold. Long shafts of preliminary light shot up from the eastern horizon, and then, when the stage was all set, and the minor characters were in position in their assigned roles, the curtains suddenly parted and the sun—the great star—star of the play, entered with all the panoply of majesty. And as I listened there behind the wings, I heard these words addressed to the sun, the works of Shakespeare came to my mind:

Full many a glorious morning have I seen,
Flatter the mountain tops with sovereign eye,
Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy.

It is a pity that more people do not see the sunrise. Many do not stay up late enough. One of the failings of millions of men, women and children on this globe is only a comparatively few are the sunrise, and I dare say there are respectable persons who have never seen it at all. . . . Milton gave us an excellent description:

Now morn her rosy steps in the eastern clime
Advancing, sowed the earth with orient pearl,
And with fresh fragrance from the opening bud
Sweetened the air.

And tricks his beams, and with new-spangled ore
Flames in the forehead of the morning sky.

—William Lyon Phelps, in "Essays On Things."

Water System Purchased By City Of Paris Tuesday

Final negotiations were completed in Georgetown Tuesday afternoon whereby the city of Paris becomes the owner of the water works system in Paris. The city paid $170,000 for the plant.

POOR SPELLING AND DEFECTIVE VISION

Poor spelling, even among the well educated, is often due largely to poor eyesight or eye defects.

To spell correctly is truthfully to recall shapes and sizes which are photographed upon the brain through the eyes.

When the material is wanted for use the memory of the combination it contains. If the eyes have not performed their work in the form of the word or words, your knowledge is faulty.

To overcome poor spelling, proper care of the eyes should be one of the first thoughts of parents and teachers.

Every school child should receive a free examination and eyes found defect should be corrected.

By such means poor spelling can be greatly reduced among children.

This is one reason poor spellers out of adults.

THE COUNTRYMAN PERIL

(Courier-Journal)

As clouds obscure the sun and showers keep the ground moist and uncultivable, the cussed cutworm gets in his deadly work. Many promising young plants plowed under an alfalfa field with the intention of planting corn, was found the past week to give up his plan, at least until replacements and cut worms had plowsharre turned up so many cutworms that he knew he would not be planted now, would be doomed. A Barren County farmer found the cutworm Nemesis "a harrowing story that rivals the Biblical plagues." He was examining his plant bed and could see the plants disappearing as he watched. Seizing his hoe, he uncovered enough cutworms in one section of the bed to fill three quart jars. The soil was fairly alive with them.

The 1930 drought killed many insects which appear to be fewer this year, in some cases at the opposite effect on the cutworm. All over the Barren area growers are complaining of the devastation of their plant beds. Truck gardens, both of the commercial and backyard varieties, are suffering most from these beds in the city. Cabbage is the most often victimized, and the tender tomato plant. Few tomatoes have been set out. All is grist to the cutworm's mill and in the busy hands of the insect anything from calliopsis to snow-on-the-mountain.

Hoeing or pulling weeds will disclose this vicious dark gray inch-long pest curled up near the roots after a feast. Its method is curl of a plant bulb to the ground. If the stem is tender he severs it with his jaws, then, if too thick, he bites through, just enough to kill it. Putting a collar of cardboard or stiff white paper around tomato plants, two inches above the ground and two inches deep will foil the cutworm, but the way to kill him, without resort to the methods never should be adopted without covering the baited area will canvas or cloth, for birds will eat the mash, with fatal results.

The cutworm cannot operate in dust; wet weather makes him happy. Home, if Kentucky crops are not to be ruined at the outset, sunshine, bringing with it dry soil and intensive cultivation, must come to the rescue.

The busy bee is busiest about 9 o'clock in the morning, scientists find.

PROGRAM

Tonight, Thursday comes Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery in "MIN AND BILL." Packed with drama, laughs and thrills. A picture of the decade. They called her a bad woman but her heart was greater than fate, this is the drama that gripped the heartstrings of the world. There was one way to save the child and Min took it. Say, this is one of the big pictures of the year. Don't miss seeing this one. You will not regret seeing Min and Bill. Be sure and see this one.

Saturday—Jack Perrin in "WEST-WARD BOUND." This is some western; full of everything that it takes to make a good western. Be sure and see it. Also a good comedy.

Monday—Conne Nancy Carroll and Charles (Buddy) Rogers in "FOLLOW THRU." A comedy knockout, full of good music and singing. Here are some of the songs, "Button Up Your Overcoat." "A Peach of a Pair," "It Must Be You," "When I Take My Girl For You," "I Want To Be Bad." Don't fail to see this picture you will assure like it.

Tuesday—Comes Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell in "OH, FOR A MAN." This is one of the best comedy dramas these two have made in the past. You want to see a good one be sure and see "Oh, For a Man and you will say it is a good one.

LYRIC THEATRE

Lyric court will reconvene next Tuesday, May 19, after a recess of two weeks.

Roger Bourland, son of Rev. and Mrs. E. B. Bourland, of Flemingsburg formerly of Carlisle, has resigned from his position with an eastern advertising agency to become a member of Bourland and Bosworth, Lexington sales promoters. Mr. Bourland and family will move to Lexington from New York.

Miss Fannie Mae Jackson, member of the graduating class of the Carlisle high school, suffered painful injuries to her spine Sunday afternoon when she tripped and fell down a flight of stairs at the city school. She was removed to the home of Mrs. W. B. Ratliff, where she has been staying during the school term.

Leonard Marshall, who is serving a sentence imposed in police court, may face additional charges as a result of an escapade Saturday afternoon. After being at work on the streets, Marshall was sent to the jail. Instead of returning to jail he became intoxicated and a short time later was picked up by City Marshal Sims and taken to jail. After his confinement, he immediately began to break up everything movable, several windows being smashed.

Social—Society

A GARDENER

(Kentuckian Citizen)

"She was making a garden with spade and with hoe,
She was building a spot where acme daisies could grow.
But the load of the day she was toiling along,
And breaking the soil so the seeds could be sown.
She said, when I asked her why she toiled in the sun:
"I didn't do it, 'twould never be done.

"My husband's a good man, and patient and kind,
But strangely to beauty of blossom he's blind.
The flowers do not thrill him the way they do me,
So I am out working with spade and with hoe
For something of beauty the children shall know."

The well for us all, I was moved to reflect,
That woman takes up what a man may neglect.
How often the mother must have to forfill
The truths that the father's indifference might kill!
We men, closely tied to the shafts of a trade
Are often by women the gardens are made!"
