Nineteen Game Wardens For State Announced

Nineteen game warden districts and eight supervisory areas have been created for the enforcement of game laws, according to announcement made last week by George L. Puckett, chairman of the Kentucky Game and Fish Commission. Before reorganization of the commission there were 25 districts.

William Clay, of Clark county, will be game warden of this district, which includes Anderson, Mercer, Boyle, Woodford, Jessamine, Garrard, Franklin, Scott, Fayette, Clark, Bourbon, Nicholas, Robertson, Harrison and Lincoln counties.

Louisville Man Praises Boy Scout Camp Here

"A Boy Scout does not philosophize about swimming. He swims." "A Boy Scout does not merely meditate about camping. He camps."

In the director's quarters are first aid supplies. Connection with the outside world is instantaneous by means of telephone. A radio is going to go at all hours. The camp library has a big collection of boys' books such as Gulliver's Travels, Alger's works, Henty's works and volumes on camping, woodcraft and bird study.

Boxing gloves are available for those who like a sporting match. All camp activities are possible without undue strain even in the hottest part of the afternoon, because the trees of the cove encircling the camp provide a solid block of shade. The highest thermometer reading in the camp this summer was recorded as 84 degrees.

D. W. Sapp, Scoutmaster, a man not richly endowed with worldly good, directs the camp. Each year for five years he has put his time against the time of these boys or supervise them without charge. He constantly is working to improve the camp, and instead of decreasing his interest in the needy boys of Louisville, who apply to the Fresh Air Fund of The Courier-Journal and The Times, he has increased his efforts. The first year of the camp ten boys were taken for ten days. Next year a group of fifteen boys were entertained. The number twelve months later jumped to twenty. Then two groups of fifteen boys each enjoyed the camp. This year Mr. Sapp feeled for the enforcement of game laws, according to announcement made last week by George L. Puckett, chairman of the Kentucky Game and Fish Commission. Before reorganization of the commission there were 25 districts.

Cynthiana Democrat Is Given To Joe Costello

The will of James M. Allen was probated in county court at Cynthiana Saturday. It was dated July 21 1932. He leaves a major part of his estate to Mr. Allen's employee in the Cynthiana office, Joe Costello, who had owned and edited for forty years. The will specified that Joe Costello who had been with Mr. Allen for many years, be given the newspaper and printing business, including all machinery, fixtures, stock, accounts, list and accounts. Three employees of the office were bequeathed $1,000 each and another received $1,000.

Four relatives were bequeathed $2,000 each, and five friends were given bequests of $1,000 each. His library was given to the Kentucky library, and the residue of his estate was bequeathed to the Harrison Memorial Hospital.

State To Investigate Decline In Warrants

Decline in the market value of state warrants is being investigated by the administration, according to Nat B. Rewell, state inspector and examiner.

It was estimated by Mr. Sewell that the decline in the value of the millions of dollars for the reason that supply men are unable to say if the state are compelled to add a percentage to their bids for the sale of the discount.

"There is no reason why state warrants should be selling as low as they are. Reports have been published that the state will not be able to pay warrants and bought $46,000 worth, but they had to put it back in the fund. Even that is low. Taking into consideration the present condition of the security markets, the state warrants still ought to be selling at par.

State "warrants are drafts against the treasury, and have the endorsement of the treasurer. The issues his check in payment of the claim which the warrant represents. There is outstanding about $14,000,000 of these warrants outstanding, dating back to the year of 1926. Until a year ago, they sold virtually at par. Recently the value has been a rapid decline in the public's opinion.

Enrollment for the University of Kentucky second semester of summer school has been completed with a total of 657 students registered. Among the student body are teachers who desire to gain credit during the coming the summer, college students who wish to make up work in advance, and individuals who are taking special work for cultural or recreational purposes. Of the 657 students, 171 did not attend the summer session. These new students came from twelve different states as well nearly every county in Kentucky. Among the new students from Nicholas county are Mrs. Forest B. Thompson and Charles O. Talbert.

Laffoon Denies Special Session Will Be Called

Governor Laffoon Tuesday denied recently circulated reports that there will be a special session of the legislature soon after the August 6 primary. Reports of such a session had been carried in campaign literature circulated in behalf of some of the Congressional candidates.

"If they're looking for a special session, they're looking in the wrong direction," Governor Laffoon said. The governor has repeatedly announced his intention of getting along without a special session despite the financial stringency confronted by his administration. He says a special session would cost the taxpayers a large sum.

RELIEF ROAD WORK IN STATE TO START

Machinery Set In Motion To Expend Kentucky's Allotment From Federal Funds

The State Railway Commission had set in motion machinery to utilize the $2,264,637 allotted Kentucky as the portion of the $120,000,000 emergency fund provided by the federal government to create jobs on highways.

The commission called for bids, to be opened at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, Aug. 24, on contracts for surfacing 75.6 miles of Federal-aid roads throughout the state. The entire cost of the projects will be met with Federal funds as the commission has decided to use the emergency relief money to match regular Federal aid.

At the same time the commission will receive bids on contracts for grading and draining 127 miles of roads, half the cost of which will be taken care of by flood relief money. Three state projects, calling for grading and draining 13.8 miles of roads also were advertised.

The commission has decided to supply any necessary relief funds on federal-aid jobs on which bids were received this week and on which bids will be received at the Aug. 10 letting. The commission has advertised for bids to be opened Aug. 10 on contracts for 53.8 miles and for surfacing 42.25 miles of roads in the state.

The total estimated cost of the improvements advertised in the Aug. 24 letting is approximately $1,000,000 and in the Aug. 10 letting about $750,000.

The commission has made arrangements to meet requirements of the emergency relief measures. At all money allotted under the act must be expended before July 1, 1933. Funds advanced under the act are to be reimbursed to the federal government over a period of 10 years beginning with the fiscal year 1935 by making annual deductions from the regular federal-aid apportionments.

The act provides that all contracts involving expenditures of emergency funds shall contain provision establishing minimum rates of wages, to be pre-determined by the State Highway Department, which contractors shall pay to skilled and unskilled labor. The funds are to be expended with the view of providing the maximum employment of local labor consistent with reasonable economy of construction and in the employment

Mr. I. B. Ross asks The Mercury to state that an article of genuine historic interest will be gratefully received by the Park Commission and placed in the museum.

The Boy Friend: "Say, who's the dumb-looking guy that drives your car around and works in the garden? I notice he always gives me a nasty look when I come in."
