Growers State New Type Tobacco Superior

Reports are being received from farmers who tried growing the variety of tobacco called No. 5 developed at the Experiment Station at Lexington, Kentucky. The Kentucky Station claimed for this variety that it is superior in resistance to black-rot and that it is also superior in quality to the standard varieties grown in Kentucky.

Reports indicate that No 5 frequently yields more than the standard varieties when cultivated in the field, and more quality frequently than the standard varieties reported the quality of No 5 better. The variety is said to be less subject to poorer grades than their own. Several farmers report that they got a better price for their quality was in cutting too severe. Some farmers reported that they could not distinguish the quality of No 5 from the standard varieties.

The No 5 seed is the type being planted and sold here by R. B. Hall whose advertisement appears elsewhere in this issue.

MR. WRIGLEY AS ADVERTISER

Lexington Herald:

William Wrigley, Jr., the chewing gum king, who started out in life with a fortune of millions of dollars by the prodigious use of gum, is a great advertiser. He made the sacrifice of giving away gum by the score-headed elves that adorn an ad over the big gum packings known all over the world. It is estimated that up to last year spent approximately $100,000 in advertising, and at one time he told his son:

"No matter what the conditions of business, never stop advertising."

He was a man of faith, who had the courage to turn a deaf ear to those who counseled him to cut down. During the first great tower month of Chicago river, stimulated by the spent a fortune on a world's series attempting to win a world's series. Because of the situation, of the Wrigley Tower he was right, though in the losses for a world series he would seem to be unsuccessful.

As our time a newspaper reporter wrote articles criticizing the Cubs. Wrigley called him in and asked him why he thought the Cubs could do better than they were doing. The newspaper reporter gave him such detailed suggestions that Wrigley hired him as president of his team and he remained in that capacity for years.

He said that as a salesman, beginning as a "drummer" and ending as a big manufacturer, a test-time as one of the great super-salesmen of his day.

THE NEWSPAPER CRITIC

When you hear a man looking for work in the local newspaper, open it up and ten to one you'll find he's a typesetter. Or a printer. Or a proofreader. He never gives it a job of printing; three to one he does not take the paper; two to one that if he is a subscriber he is a delinquent one; even odds he never does anything to help the publisher to run a good paper, and 40 to one he is the most eager to see the paper when it comes out and borrows it from his neighbor before they get time to read it.—Wyoming (Minn.) Banner.

Social and Society

A COUNTRY PHILOSOPHER

(Frank L. Stanton)

The cold has killed the corn off Ol' Smithfield all the wheat;
The ice is on the peach blossom and the apple blossoms sweet.
An' the country is in mournin' from the mountain to the sea,
But the good Lord runs the weather, an' he ain't a-bothrin' me.

The hens was out for honey an' bees for their jobs,
But the blizzard stopped their bunin' an' they frore up in their hives;
An' there won't be any sweet-nin' for the coffee or tea,
But the good Lord runs the weather, an' it ain't a-bothrin' me.

The mockin' birds was singin' just the sweetest kind o' notes,
But now they're sittin silent with a flannel roun' their throats;
An' there won't be any music 'til the summer time to be,
But the good Lord runs the weather, an' it ain't a-bothrin' me.

It don't make any difference what these claimjin' seasons bring;
It's cold, the fire's a-blazin',
I hear the chimney sing;
An' I'm as happy as Sandy with the breeze a-blowin' free,
For the good Lord runs the weather, an' it ain't a-bothrin' me!
