INSANE NEGRO IS MASTER OF PIANO

Plays Mostly Classics and Grand Opera Overtures.

Hastings, Neb.—There's music in the soul of "Mac" McPherson, seventy-year-old negro in the State Hospital for the Insane here. And it's good music.

Twenty-seven years' confinement in the institution has not driven from Mac Pherson his love for the piano, his ear for music, and the nimbleness from his fingers.

He suffers from paranoiac insanity, an incurable disease. He is violently insane on all subjects except music, and on this he can talk rationally and intelligently. He is a master at the piano, playing by ear the classics and overtures from the world's famous operas. Jazz he doesn't like.

A wealthy woman sent him to college at Omaha when he was a young man. He studied and became an accomplished musician. Following graduation he went on the stage, making concert tours of this country and Europe. He has played for several kings and queens, it is said.

When McPherson went insane in 1902 he lost all interest in music. His art vanished. Graduated from Omaha, until today he can play the piano almost as well as in the days when he walked out into the glare of stage footlights in famous theaters of his day.

Ship Grins at Gale, But Never at Bees

Seattle, Wash.—Officers and crew of the freighter Admiral Evans, which battled hurricanes, typhoons and heavy gales, but one of which the experiences occurred when the vessel was stranded by a huge swarm of bees in the Philippines.

Millions of the insects swarmed onto the topmast and foretruck, forming a mass four feet long and two feet in diameter. Many of them deserted the mass and began investigating the bridge and other parts of the vessel until navigation was made difficult.

In a report to the admiral Mulligan here, Capt. I. F. Boyd, master of the Margaret, said their attacks were required to don slickers and tie wet rags on their heads and arms, then a hose was send aloft and a stream of water, backed by fifty pounds pressure, was played on the bees.

That started the mass to flight. The insects swarmed all over the ship, invaded the engine room through ventilators and attacked officers and crew alike. It took the Chinese deck force most of the day to clear the ship of the bees.

Huge Turtle Provides a Sea Serpent Scare

Lake's Name Boiled Down

"I noted with interest that the name of Lake Chargoggagoggmanchaugagoggchaubunagungamaugg has been reduced in the long word contest," said a letter to the editor of a San Francisco paper from New Hampshire in a good American word of a most offensive kind, type for a dauntless was created by the Indians long before English was known in this continent. As we are super a few years ago gave the Interpretation as follows: "I fish, you fish, we fish; you fish on your side, nobody shall fish in the middle." No "Thoroughbred" Cattle

Purebred animals are horses, cattle, sheep or swine registered and entered whose ancestry are known, whose pedigree and genealogy have been registered in the proper way in the breed records. The word thoroughbred, in the sense of the distinct breed of light horses which have been bred for many centuries for their speed and stamina having come originally from the union of the Arabian, and Turkish horses with the English type of horse. There cannot therefore be any such thing as thoroughbred cattle.

"Nationality" and "Race"

Nationality of course should not be confused with race. For example, Included in American nationality are representatives of almost all races. The American nation as a whole include most of the European peoples, except the Turks, Magyars and Finns who are at least partly of Mongolian origin; the Negroes from Africa, the aboriginal Americans, Australia, South Africa and other lands colonized by whites; the Hindus, Persians, Arabs, Hebrews and some of the races of northern Africa.

Bible's Literary Merit

The Bible, either in its early form or in its latest revisions, is considered to be of the highest literary type of the age in which each was conceived or published. The conciseness and chronological clearness of the earlier books, the descriptive perfection, the lyric quality of the psalms and pastoral works and the perfection of the narrative of the New Testament would place the Bible, aside from its religious value, at the head of all literary productions of any period.

COURT WILL PROBE FORMER OFFICIAL

Grand Jury To Investigate Expenditure Of Several Thousand Dollars By W. H. Jones

An investigation of the office of former County Attorney William H. Jones, Jr., will be made by a Franklin county grand jury, announced Attorney William B. Autery has summoned General H. M. Richard, acting Adjutant General, and Gen. Ellerbe Carter, former adjutant, in charge of inquiry which has been investigating the revenue of the office of the grand jury.

Decision to take court action in the matter was reached after Autery declined to account for a large sum of money during his term since which he was Adjutant General. Whether the sum is $2,000 or $3,000 is the amount of discrepancies alleged to have been found. Richard said the state would "run into thousands of dollars" before the matter is settled, about which no accounting has been made.

It was learned that an appropriation of $22,000 was made for the contingent fund of the office of all armories, and that Jones spent $15,000 of this amount during his home town.

Because of the fact that Jones spent $15,000 during the last year of his term and ending next July, General Denhardt has refused to sign warrants covering all of the clerical workers in his office.

It bears every year. The other trees are about fifteen years old and not nearly so prolific.

HISTORICAL BATTLE OF BLUE LICKS MAY BE REPRODUCED ON LARGE SCALE IF CONGRESSIONAL SUM IS ALLOWED

Kentucky's celebration of the George Rogers Clark bicentennial this year includes two events that may merge into a joint affair of national importance. C. Frank Dunn, state chairman of the Kentucky George Rogers Clark bicentennial committee, said Saturday.

Mr. Dunn said he was informed Congressman Fred Vinson, Ashland, of the ninth district, is planning to introduce a bill in congress for an appropriation of $100,000 or more to commemorate the sesquicentennial of the Battle of Blue Licks in a state-wide scale as the recent Yorktown celebration, which was staged at a cost of $125,000 on one day alone when the Cornwallis' Surrender pageant was staged.

Former State Representative Wilson J. Curtis, Paris, Ky. in a conference with Mr. Dunn, stated that Congressman Vinson may seek an appropriation much larger than $100,000 to reproduce the battle of Blue Licks, which is now classed by historians as the "Last Battle of the Revolution."

Working along similar lines except as to a congressional appropriation, Mrs. Peyton B. Howard, Lexington, has suggested that the various chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Kentucky join with the Kentucky Bicentennial committee in staging a pageant on the battle ground at Blue Licks, which is now closed by historians as the "Last Battle of the Revolution."
