CHAPTER XIV

Janison showed back his chair. "There would come my father, chosen" he said loudly. The door flew open and the door. It was a woman's face that looked in. "Hello!" she called. "Janison, get up!"

"Hello!" she called. "Janison, get up!" she said. "There's a man here to see you. He's waiting outside the door."

"Who?" she asked. "A man named Janison. He says he's your father's friend."

"What time is it?" she asked. "It's about ten o'clock. He's been waiting for some time."

"All right," she said. "I'll go and see who he is. I'll be right back."

"All right," she said. "I'll go and see who he is. I'll be right back."

"All right," she said. "I'll go and see who he is. I'll be right back."

They talked for a long time. The man said he was a friend of the father's and that he had come to see the mother and child.

The mother looked at the man for a long time. She did not know him, but she felt that she should trust him.

"All right," she said. "I'll go and see who he is. I'll be right back."

"All right," she said. "I'll go and see who he is. I'll be right back."
