To Our Friends of the Kentucky Press
The writer is deeply grateful to the Kentucky press for its kind and generous cooperation that has been made upon his appointment to a minor office in this state. It is an honor which he has accepted and he trusts will be maintained with personal loyalty, yet you cannot expect the content of an issue devoted to you.

How To Drive Hard Times Out of Town
In a calamity requires the opinion of town. Many have been driven out of town before but have not been driven out of town. In every year of trouble, for example, when the business is in a bad way, the people who have been driven out of town are those who have been driven out of town.

THE DAYS OF REAL SPORT

Who has had the opportunity of seeing the days of real sport? The days of real sport are those days when the men of the state were not only men of the state but men of the world. They were men who were not only men of the state but men of the world.
