LITTLE ROCK

It is amusing as well as regrettable to watch some sales people and some customers. We say amuse, for all do not fall into class that we refer to. Perhaps it is good salesmanship, and will make for the clerk in the eyes of the manager, to be able to sell an article to a customer whether it suits said customer or not. It is likely pitiful to see some people who have no eye for color or lines, fall for the flattering adjectives of a saleslady. Only the other day we chanced to see a poor victim trying to buy a coat. It was out of style, too short and too tight for the lady and yet when we left the clerk had about sold the coat. We don't know why she was or any details except the fact that in all probability her world was the four walls of her house. She did not have time to dream of foreign places, of varaitea, beautiful mountain scenery, crystal lakes, of boating, hiking, riding, cities, reading everything the lady stands for culture, luxury, comfort, and entertainment. Her horizon was by hard work. That she had never had time to study styles and graceful lines it was merely a coat. Also we noticed a hat that some one had sold to an unsuspecting customer. It was really a curiosity—yet we can almost hear the flattering words of praise when it was sold.

On the other hand some customers were clerks in verge of nervous prostrations. We observed a big, rough, homely uncultured woman trying to buy a pair of shoes. She could not be pleased and went the round of available places. Pair after pair of shoes were shown her by the tired clerk. At last we realized that the customer actually believed her feet were different from the ordinary person and that she could not be fit in an ordinary place. We could not refrain from glancing at the feet in question and observed no masculine feet that any shoe store could have supplied. And then we wondered. Human nature is a funny thing.

ABOUT THE FARM

(Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station)

It is important that the hog bleed thoroughly. Any blood in meat causes spoilage to set in quickly. Bruising or stunning the animal before it is stuck may prevent proper bleeding. Another important factor in preventing spoilage is to thoroughly chill the meat before it is put into the cure.

Roup, chicken-pox and canker, common among poultry at this time of year, are usually caused by damp, poorly ventilated houses, drafts or overcrowding. Isolate sick birds as soon as they are found, and put those into the drinking water of the entire flock.

Newspapers wrapped about the trunks of young trees protect them from attacks of rabbits and other animals. Tied with string or twine, such paper can stay until it weathers away. Protect trees from sun and sleet or trash from base of trunk tends to check injury by sun.

A good way to determine the need of a soil for fertilizer materials is to apply these materials separately and in combination on small plots. A quarter of an acre makes a good test plot. Leave an untreated plot for comparison. Red or sweet clover is a good test crop.

There is enough vacant barn space on most farms to house the implements used on that farm. Engineers estimate that farm machinery could be made to do double the amount of work; that is, last twice as long, by careful use plus housing through unused seasons.

26 Colors Used On 1934 License Plates

Folk living on the main highways of the nation who enjoy watching the license plates of autos as they flash by will have a dizzy time of it in 1934 because of the color schemes of the new tags. The 40th anniversary of the auto will see 26 different color motifs, ranging from black on yellow used by the District of Columbia, Idaho, Michigan, West Virginia and Oklahoma, to white and apple green in the Philippines. Some 34 states will change the color combinations on their tags beginning January 1. The list of color combinations for passenger cars in all States as reported to the American Automobile Association by State officials follows:

Alabama, black on orange.
Arizona, black on copper.
California, black on orange.
Colorado, yellow on black.

SCATTERED RURAL NEGRO CHILDREN

(Courier-Journal)

One of the perplexities of a dual system of education was developed in detail by the report of the Kentucky Educational Commission on the Negro schools.

The scattered rural Negro families make a problem. No families exist to every ten provided for 700 Negro children. Some central inter-county school jointly maintained appears to be the only solution. Fortunately, men are gravitating to towns more and more than the colored race, a trait emphasized by social conditions. Negro farm settlements where they can thus bunching in a district, and that are divided. Only 27,000 children in the country, 28,000 in the cities.

But nine counties have fewer than six Negro children each, twenty-eight average only sixteen and more than half the counties average seventy, about one child for every five square miles. They are not distributed evenly, however; but, when one or two buildings would accommodate all the Negro children in a county and the children are in half a dozen groups too far apart to attend the same school, their attendance is as much as three or six times their number should.

While the Negro population has decreased 20 per cent since 1900, the school attendance of the race is only practically stationary from 1920 to 1930, indicating a larger proportionate of the children in school, though fewer enumerated.

BUY CHRISTMAS SEALS

Are you mailing all your letters with Christmas Seals pasted on the back?

You pay for Christmas Seals but once, but they work for you all year round.

Christmas Seals save human lives but they cannot save them until people buy them.

Almost 12,000 are many girls as boys die of tuberculosis between the ages of 15 and 24. Tuberculosis associations are devoting special attention to this age group. Christmas Seals support their work.

Tuberculosis costs the people of the United States more than a billion dollars a year. That's about $8 each for every man, woman and child. How much do you pay for your Christmas Seals to fight tuberculosis?

Among all young women who die between the ages of 15 and 30, one out of four dies of tuberculosis—a mean sacrifice to ignorance and indifference. Money will help, but Christmas Seals spread the knowledge that saves lives.

The double-barred cross on the Christmas Seal is double-barrelled, too. One barrel shoots a message of cheer for the friend who gets the letter or package. The other shoots definite aid toward somebody who is in danger from tuberculosis.

We will be a long time paying for the depression in terms of added health hazards. Recent figures show that Illness has been greatest among the general population. The danger of tuberculosis is increased when people are destitute. Buy Christmas Seals, they fight tuberculosis.

I look at the Christmas Seal and say:

"This friend who remembereth me, Helps also the thought of the sick today,

Wherever they chance to be.

And he giveth not only to cheer his own,

But to all who hath need is his mercy shown."

Judge Hens For Laying Ability

The adoption of a system of judging poultry from a production or utility standpoint rather than for fine feathers, proved popular in the 1933 county and district fair season in Kentucky, according to J. R. Humphrey of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

Heretofore pullets and hens have been judged largely from an exhibition standpoint; that is, for their feathers and colorings, regardless of their ability to lay eggs. New members of the poultry department at the College of Agriculture are insisting that they be first of all good layers. Of course they must be free from general disqualifications and be good representatives of the breed.

The score card used by members of the poultry department in their judging of fairs and shows this year contains the following divisions and points under each division:

Health, vigor and vitality, 30 points; breed type, 10 points; egg production ability 40 points; uniformity of exhibit, 20 points, and color markings, 10 points.

With this method of judging spectators at shows can see that the awards are made on a basis that can be applied to their own flocks when they go home, Mr. Humphrey pointed out. The judges usually give reasons for their placing of birds, and this serves to educate exhibitors.

Since the Coast Guard took over international ice patrol duties following the Titanic disaster, not a single life has been lost through the collision of a ship with an iceberg.

DOMESTIC TREASURE

Wife: "How do you like the potato salad, dear?"

Hubby: "Delicious! Did you buy it yourself?"—Boston Transcript.

DAYLIGHT AND DARK

When an automobile stops by the roadside in daylight, "that's trouble." When it stops after dark, that's a garage.
