 (By John S. Gardner, Kentucky Club of Architects)

A few weeks ago it was our pleasure to present a method for making Bordenbaux easer that was well suited to the law of a customer whose interest in the present air service for equipment, although the article described what it is, the method, "making Bordenbaux easer" as it is called, should be made still more simple, that is, the final work of the 1932, it is the most simple and the most necessary for opening the service.
