THURSDAY, MARCH 9, 1933
This Nation Will Endure.
The great nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and prosper. So first of all let me assert my firm belief that the only real glory that will come to our people will come through their own initiative, their own hard work, and their own untiring and untold sacrifices.

Under the Public Law of 1933.
Let the nation be reminded that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has secured the confidence of the people by its policy of loaning money to the states and to the people.

The following from the Monitor—especially in the light of the banking crisis, which has occurred:
The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has secured the confidence of the people by its policy of loaning money to the states and to the people.

There is a general trend in this case toward a more liberal policy in preference to one of public affairs.
There has been a trend in this case toward a more liberal policy in preference to one of public affairs.

What happens may come this Nation will face without fear, with confidence in its leadership, with a faith that is sure to be justified.

Congress Will Find a Way Out.
What steps will be taken to revive the present economic situation? The leading newspapers will express their opinion on this subject.

Confidence.
A director of a bank in a neighboring town told me that confidence in the banks is at a low stage.

A Wise Action.
The directors of the various banks in this state are taking a wise action in their present policy.

A Difficult Task.
Only $1200 approximately remains of the fund allocated for the relief of the unemployed.

The Radio Proves Itself.
The broadcast of the President's address has proven the value of the radio as a means of communication.

THEATRICAL BOOKS
"Little Woodworth Hears"
This is a book for the young, but it is also a book for the old.
