Mt. Olivet Man Drowned In River At Maysville

John W. Neal, 29, well known Mt. Olivet young man, was drowned early Monday morning when he fell from the stern deck of the steamer "J. B." into the Ohio river as the steamer was making a landing at the Maysville waterfront.

Neal became unbalanced as the boat was making a turn for the shore. Spectators along the bagks and on the boat saw him fall into the water but were unable to reach him. He was unable to swim.

There were more than 100 passengers on the excursion boat, which was returning from a river cruise.

Bank Record Is Set With No Closings In 1934

Not a bank has failed in the United States in the first five months of 1934, J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency, cited as a "striking" instance of business recovery.

There has been as well, he said, an enormous increase in the amount of bank deposits, which he called one of the most significant signs both of psychological and actual recovery.

Most of the recovery he attributed to the creation of deposit insurance. "The result," he said, "is that public fear over the insecurity of deposits has been dissipated, and we see the new confidence reflected in the enormous increase in the amount of bank deposits."

Over the past 10 years, he declared, there was an average of 315 bank failures in the first four months of the year. The first five months of 1934 has shown not a failure, in contrast, he reported.

Further business "tonics" he said, he saw in proposals to permit the reconstruction finance corporation and the federal reserve system to make direct loans to industry.

PRECIOUS THINGS

(Marjorie Hallaway)

I wonder,
Do you know what when I leave
I carry with me precious things
Not gifts of gold or silver,
Not jewels, sparkling, brilliant gems
Not silks with rich embroidery
Ah, far more precious are your gifts

Your smile of greeting
When you meet me at the door;
The firm, warm pressure of your hands;
The low, sweet cadence of your voice;
Light, joyful laughter.

The firelight's dancing patterns on the floor;
The gleam of bronze;
Purple crocus in a yellow luster bowl;
And ghostly curtains
Fluttering in the cool night wind.

I wonder,
Do you know I love to come?
Perhaps for just a day or two,
Yet I know that should the day become
A week, a month,
The warmth of parting would be the same;

The kiss, the words,
"Come soon again,"
Would be not from the lips,
But from the heart.

I think that
Is the most precious gift of all.

Convict Admits Killing Man Eleven Years Ago

Because he "didn't want anything to go wrong," Ernest Hall, who was released from prison, a convict in the state reformatory at Frankfort, admitted the stabbing of a man in Lexington eleven years ago, it was revealed Tuesday by police to whom the prisoner confessed.

The murder victim, a man of years old, is now serving a two-year term for petit larceny. Fingerprints have been sent to the refrigerator from Harrison county, Ind., from which point Hall is wanted on his confession. Troxel told the police, he has been in prison eleven years. He was convicted twice in Danville and once at Cynthiana for manslaughter and was once in Illinois for highway robbery.

Troxel confessed that on May 6, 1923, about 2 o'clock in the morning, he stabbed and killed William Terrill, Lexington, during a fight on Willard street, there, but never was arrested for the deed. At the time of the killing Sir Hume, Lexington, was arrested by Ernest Thompson, now Chief of Police, and Dudley B. Veal, now Fayette county jailer, charged with the murder, but he was acquitted.

A few days ago Troxel said he heard that another innocent man was to be tried for the murder of Merrill, said he decided to tell the truth about the killing. He confessed to Chief Thompson, Detective John Sellers and Ed Wiseman and Commonwealth's Detective W. B. Harrell.

Troxel was indicted by the next Fayette county grand jury, Chief Thompson said, and will be returned to Lexington for trial.

DR. PATTERSON LAUDED

The accomplishments of the late Dr. James Kennedy Patterson, "distinguished Scottish immigrant, who rose to the presidency of the University of Kentucky," which post he held for forty-one years, were extolled Friday by A. O. Stanley, an alumnus of the institution, former Governor and former United States Senator, in dedicating a monument to Dr. Patterson on the campus of the university which he developed. In 1913 Dr. Patterson became president of A. & M. College of Kentucky, which at that time to use the words of Dr. Patterson, "had a name, a charter, a yearly income of $900 and nothing else."

Farmer Killed, Another Shot By Bank Bandits

W. P. Minnick, 60, farm laborer, was shot and killed and Jeff Doolin, 30, farmer, was shot and critically wounded near Mining City, Butler county, late last Thursday afternoon by two escaped bank bandits and their woman companion.

A posse of officers from three counties searched for Robert Bennett, 35, and Guffy Childers, 35, escaped Muhlenburg county bank bandits, and Mrs. Ollie Orbkine, all of whom are charged with the murder. Doolin, together with Minnick, tenant on his farm, and Doolin's brother, Ben Doolin, were searching Thursday for a bull that had strayed from when they came upon two men they had been prospecting for gold on the stolen skiff. They were accompanied by a woman who was recently acquitted of a bank robbery charge in the same city. After the shooting started with them they escaped recently from the Muhlenburg county jail where they were held on charges growing out of the robbery. Farmers are notified by mail of receipt of the checks.

Approximately 100 more checks are to be received. These are mostly for amounts under $10 and are from contracts and some contracts were received after the date set for the drive.

The checks received last week were rental payment on land taken out of tobacco production. The farmers were paid at the rate of $20 per acre.

The principal benefits to be derived through the signing of practice control contracts will come when the crops of the farmers are sold next winter.

May Use Rented Acres For Feed

AAA Modifies Ruling Pertaining To Fields Leased Under Terms Of Control Contracts

Responding to needs resulting from an extensive and prolonged drouth, the Agricultural Adjustment Administration in Washington notified Dean Chester C. Davis, director of the Agricultural Adjustment Monday that it had modified certain provisions of the wheat, corn-hog and tobacco contracts so as to relax some of the restrictions on the growing of forage crops.

Farmers may now plant and harvest all kinds of forage crops for livestock feeding on land taken out of their growing any part of their farms, including acreage rented to the government. Livestock may be pastured on the land, or hay or grain harvested from it, the new regulations may be turned into pastures and other fields which had been abandoned as last removed from production and rented to the government.

Many farmers had designated good pasture land as their wheat acreage and therefore had been unable to run their livestock on it. They may now open the gates and in many cases have available feed grown on the land for the support of their cattle, sheep, hogs and work stock.

Nation In Grip Of Heat Wave And Drouth

Sun-baked fields, yellow and brown with the withered ruins of crops thirsted in vain for life-giving moisture Monday as June started its entry into May in setting records for heat and drought.

In only a few scattered sections of the country were rain and cooler winds being temporary relief. Parts of Minnesota and North and South Dakota quaffed gratefully of showers, but elsewhere in the same states temperatures reached all time highs and dust storms added to the discomfort.

Oklahoma's Monday heat was the hottest in 28 years, the weather bureau announced at Washington, with an intense heat wave that has been increased before the month ended.

Wheat and corn fields of the Dakotas and Minnesota hardly burned but sacrificed additional thousands of bushels to the weather as all-time heat records piled up.

An official temperature of 102.2 in Chicago at mid-afternoon set a new June mark there and was only 7 of a degree under the all time, any month record of 102.9, set July 24, 1901. But downstaters cast envious eyes on Chicago, for their thermometers registered 104 degrees, the official reading at Morris, Ill., was 107 degrees.

To conserve as far as possible all feed in this area for livestock, Dean Coffey, Gov. Floyd Olson of Minnesota declared an immediate embargo on the shipment of hay, grain or feed stuffs for feeding or grazing purposes. Other states quickly declared an "unprecedented emergency" existing and took similar action.

In Iowa, where every weather bureau station reported a temperature above 100 and of higher for Thursday, heavy dust storms blanketed the state, halting outdoor work and ruining pastures, however, brought a measure of relief.

The Louisville weather bureau said Friday was the hottest June 1 they since 1881, when the mercury soared to 96 degrees. The temperature Friday was 95 at 2 o'clock.

Kentucky baked in 90-degree temperatures, and the weather bureau was little relief in sight. May was the second driest month on record for the state with only .72 inches of rainfall compared with the 1926 record of 1.39 inches.

At Cincinnati, a new heat record for June was established with a reading of 97 Friday afternoon.

320 Awarded Degrees At University Of Kentucky

Approximately 320 students were awarded degrees and certificates at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, Dr. Frank L. McVey, president, announced. Dr. Arthur F. Morgan, chairman of the board of the Tennessee Valley Authority was the commencement speaker.

The commencement exercises at the University of Kentucky Friday completed a week of commencement activities. Dr. Morgan, prominent engineer and educator, delivered the commencement address Friday morning. Dr. Marion Neason Walk-up, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Lexington, delivered the invocation.

Dr. Morgan, speaking on "Education and Social Change," declared that the present economic depression is a challenge to the educational system of the country to prepare for the future.

Dr. McVey conferred degrees on the graduates and presented certificates to those completing the courses in the College of Agriculture and Home Economics.

Dr. Walk-up pronounced the benediction.

Minister Accused Of Shooting Boy

Rev. W. B. Garriott, Of Danville, Arrested After Shooting 17-Year-Old Boy With Rifle

Rev. W. B. Garriott, presiding elder of the Danville district of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was arrested by Boyle county authorities Friday afternoon on a warrant charging shooting in sudden heat and passion following the shooting and serious wounding of Mitchell Bailey, 17-year-old Negro youth.

Bailey was taken to the Danville hospital following the shooting, which took place at 11:30 o'clock Friday morning. Upon examination he revealed a bullet from a 22 caliber rifle entered the back of his head, passed through the brain and lodged against the frontal bone of his forehead.

The boy was in a serious condition and physicians held little hope for his recovery.

Bailey, with two other boys, was playing in the vicinity of Rev. Garriott's residence when the Methodist were attempting to cut a fork from a tree to make a slingshot, Bailey's companions said, when Rev. Garriott fired at them. The minister was attempting to scare them, he said, but when the boys ran across an open field, he fired two shots and one shot struck Bailey.

This is a considerable increase over the 1933 special session, the 1934 regular session and the 1934 special session, which, Mr. Sewell said, could be attributed to the spirit in general, political or factional programs this year.

"If the membership will definitely settle itself to practical, useful work, the public service for which it is in session can be accomplished and it is hoped that $400,000 for the special session," the state inspector and examiner said.

"If not, and if bonuses are voted for and efforts made to defeat taxes are paid to employes, as has been the case in quite lately," he said, "that we shall have a very much more expensive session and there will be no relief for the people, a period of six months, to around $500,000. It is hoped that this legislature will not permit such a record to be made."

Kentucky Was 142 Years Old Monday

Monday marked the 142nd anniversary of Kentucky's admission to the Union.

On June 4, 1792, the territory known as West Fincastle county, Virginia, was admitted into the federal union as a sovereign state the Commonwealth of Kentucky.

The admission followed a convention-tary state house. On June 1, 1792, the first general assembly convened to hold its next session in the state capital at Frankfort. Since then Frankfort has been the seat of government.

A large frame building in Frankfort served as the second state house, which also was a temporary structure. The 1793 legislature met there and held in this building.

The third state house of Kentucky was on the first permanent capitol. It was occupied by the legislature in November of 1794. It was destroyed by fire, however, and only the stone structure, three stories in height.

Four Orphaned Children Beaten By Their Aunt

Four orphaned children, ranging in ages from 8 to 17 years, displayed to county officers at Harlan Friday bloody and torn bodies and charged that they had been unmercifully beaten by an aunt. The aunt, Mrs. Lula Maples, 35, of Wallins, was arrested on a charge of assault and battery and was placed in jail at Harlan to await trial.

The children, Lula Perkins Bailey, 8; Mallard Bailey, 11; Willard Bailey, 12, and Andrew Bailey, 17, told officers they were beaten "lots of times," but that the most recent beating was administered because we couldn't finish hoeing a field of corn in three days." The aunt charged by Mrs. Maples was sworn out by Constable John Hensley when Mallard, crying and bleeding, came to him and asked for protection.

Andrew told officers their father was killed in a mine accident at Jellico, Tenn., several years ago, and that their mother died in a Tennessee hospital four years later. Since they went to their aunt's home after their mother's death.

Officers who inspected the bodies of the children said they bore long welts.
