Just How Big Is The Telephone Company

THE Southern Bell Company is only as big as the people of Kentucky and the South are required to be.

The 2,700,000 people of this great state would not be satisfied with the service provided by a company of low size, incapable of furnishing the high type of service which the people of this state require.

The telephone service made possible by the people of Kentucky is large and it is necessary to secure a large investment of money to do this service.

To operate, maintain and expand this intricate system requires a small army of more than 1,500 workmen, including general office employees, whose annual payroll is over $10,000,000.

Because of its size the telephone industry is one of the largest contributors to the support of the State and the nation by the payment of taxes. The telephone company of necessity is also a large user of raw materials, and spends large sums of money in Kentucky for the products of the State.

Kentucky is a big, important State, requiring a telephone company large enough to insure continuous, adequate and dependable telephone service—a service not limited by State lines, but world-wide in its scope.

A telephone company smaller in size and resources could not render such a service and would not be capable of serving the people of Kentucky satisfactorily.
