THE SHOWER

(Mabel Pett Miller)

I love the sound
of distant rain
coming across
the fields of grain,
up and over
the slanting roofs
like antelope
with silver hoofs.

I hear them forage
through the corn
with flick of tail
and limy horn,
half expecting
to see them run
up a rainbow
into the sun;
when suddenly
all wild things will
they disappear
beyond the hill
