Mystery of Poor Corn Crop Solved

Lack of Potassium Is Given as Reason for Failures, Expert Says.

By C. M. Linsley, Soils Extension Specialist, University of Illinois.—WNU Service.

Through a new potassium test and experiments with potassium fertilizers, the mystery of corn crop failures on some older soils has been solved.

Farmers who limed their land years ago, in many cases phosphated it and have been growing clovers regularly in the rotation, have suddenly found that corn has begun to fail. In some fields the poor corn shows up in spots and in other fields the entire crop is a failure. The soils often are high in fertility, and until recently the cause of the failures has been unknown by the farmers working the land.

With the perfecting of tests for available potassium, or potash, it has been found that most such failures have been caused by a lack of sufficient potassium. Since corn seems to be especially sensitive to this element, it is the first crop to show a need for the mineral.

Soils showing a deficiency of potassium but containing plenty of the other fertility elements will again yield normal corn crops if treated with potash fertilizer. It also has been found that application of manure and straw will help delay the time when lack of potassium becomes serious.

Both manure and straw should be applied before decay and leaching have had time to carry away the potash and other elements of fertility. Return of straw to land that has not grown clover may reduce yields temporarily by tying up the small amount of available nitrogen found in such soils.

Sheep Income This Year Is Expected to Be High

"Prices for lambs in 1936 are likely to average the highest of any year since 1924," says J. B. McNulty, agricultural extension economist, University Farm, St. Paul. Wool prices also promise to be strong, making the outlook relatively favorable for sheep men.

The basis of this forecast is largely the fact that the number of ewes in 1936 is likely to be little, if any, larger than in 1935, and about 7 per cent lower than in 1934. Woolen mill activity has been at a high level and the carry-over of wool in the United States is likely to be the smallest in several years.

Prices for fed lambs marketed from late winter to May, 1936, are likely to be higher than for the corresponding period a year ago. A reduced crop of late lambs in the western states resulted in a short supply of feeder lambs for winter feed lots. Some increase in demand may be expected from higher consumer incomes.

On the outlook for horses there is no longer any large demand for horses except on farms. Even on farms there has been an increasing substitution of mechanical power for horse power. The number of horses needed in the future will probably be no greater, and possibly less than at present, unless motor fuel costs rise decidedly as compared with farm feeds and hired labor. Farmers in surplus feed areas should raise enough colts to supply their own needs, but the price of good horses is not likely to increase.

Tankage for Milk Cows

While Midwest agricultural experiment stations have recently been testing out tankage as a protein feed for fattening steers, the Massachusetts station at Amherst has been experimenting with tankage as a source of protein for dairy cows. Twenty-four cows were chosen from the Massachusetts State college herd and divided into two groups of 12 each. The cows were fed a high grade dry-rendered tankage by the double reversal method, one group receiving the tankage ration for [illegible] days, while the other received a soy bean-cottonseed ration. These rations were subsequently reversed three times, so that each group received each ration for two different periods of [illegible] days each.

Spray for Peach Trees

A lime-sulphur spray, either liquid or powder, will control both insects and disease on peaches, advises the North Carolina State college. This should be applied any time between now and just before the buds swell. After the buds swell, this application will not control peach leaf curl disease. Where an oil spray is used for control of scale insects a 3-4-50 Bordeaux mixture must be added. When making this combination spray the Bordeaux should be made first and then the oil added. In making liquid lime sulphur use six gallons lime-surphur to 50 gallons of the spray. For the dry mix 15 pounds of dry lime sulphur should be used to 50 gallons of spray.

The Dugong

A dugong is an aquatic mammal, native to Australia and the Indian ocean, and closely related to the manatee. Its body is bluish-gray and seal-like, with front flippers and a broad, flat tail. The flesh is edible and considered a great delicacy by the Malays. The oil is a substitute for cod liver oil, a full-grown animal producing 10 or 12 gallons.

East Union And Moorefield Adult Education Notes

An all day meeting is planned by the Moorefield Home Arts class for Friday the 17th, at the home of Mrs. Earl Clay. Everyone coming may bring any kind of dish they wish to, toward a "pot-luck" dinner.

This meeting is planned to provide more time in which to carry on the regular class activity and for the social relationship to be derived.

Many different phases of activity are now being carried on with the newest members still working on the oilcloth unit and the others on the painting unit. Friday will be devoted especially to making oilcloth handy holders, cocoanut twine holders, and spool what-not shelves.

All ladies are urged to come out and join us.

The East Union Home Arts class members are now working on a "Colonial Sampler" unit. Kitchen samplers are being appliqued and framed and other linen ones are being cross-stitched. Our days are still Tuesday and Thursday.

An exhibit of work done in adult classes throughout the state will be on display at the K. E. A meeting this week, and we plan to have a good representation of our work there.

The Pig A Hog In Six Months

Time being important, even to a hog, Grady Sellards of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture has written a circular on limiting a pig's life to six months, that is, producing market-sized hogs in a half year.

Methods which he prescribes, as extension swine expert for the college, make a pig weigh 200 pounds in six months, which is just the proper size and age to have its throat cut. On some farms in the past, and even today, so they say, pigs have the freedom of the place for a year or even two and sometimes loaf about until almost hoary with age.

Sellards disapproves such practices. In keeping with the times, he would speed up hog development. He would begin with good stock, even recommending purebreds. His circular lists the principal characteristics of good male and female hogs, the kind that produce 200-pounders while still young and tender. Then he tells how to handle the animals, how to feed them, about the houses and pens in which to keep them, how to look after their health, so they will grow fast and return a profit. He takes the reader through the brief life span of the modern pig from the farrowing pen to the slaughter house.

Circular No. 211, "The Pig from Birth to Market in Six Months," can be had from county agents or by writing to the College of Agriculture, Lexington.

Number Of Farms Up 523,702 In 5 Years

Reviewing the "back to the land" movement of the last five years, Secretary Wallace said Tuesday thousands who had returned to farms were now dependent upon relief.

Classifying the majority of the new farmers as "industrial refugees," Wallace said in a radio address that "agriculture has been bearing its share of the city relief load in a truly heroic manner."

The 1935 farm census, Wallace said, reported an increase of 523,702 farms in five years, making a total of 6,812,350 in 1935, with the biggest increases in the New England States and the Southern Appalachian hill and mountain country from Pennsylvania south through Birmingham, Ala.

ODD ACCIDENTS

A 10-year-old lad, Fred Cass, fell into a storm drain while playing near his California home. A swift current, fed by heavy rains, swept him through the underground pipe for a distance of two miles. Then he came out in an open stretch from which he was rescued merely scratched and bruised.

In attempting to pass a house which was being moved along a California street the car of Mrs. Lena Wright grazed the structure, causing it to teeter on the rollers and the chimney to collapse. She was killed by falling brick which crushed through the top of her car.

Henry Wilcoxen, 12-year-old Michigan boy, would have bled to death from a wound received at target practice if the bullet had not carried a piece of wool into the wound. The wad of wool, torn from the lad's coat collar, stopped the flow of blood from a severed artery.

A swimming pool 90 feet deep is little consolation to Steve Bird in exchange for a barn, two trucks and other equipment which were lost when a lime sink suddenly caved in on his Florida property. Such underground pits are believed caused by ancient underground rivers.

When Gustave Stocksick of Missouri fell on the ice during a cold spell last winter he evidently believed he had injured himself permanently. Apparently believing he would perish in the cold he shot and killed himself. Physicians examining his body said he had suffered only bruises from the fall.

After sideswiping another car the one driven by John Bartunek, a Nebraskan, jumped a ditch and a wire fence, turned entirely over and landed right side up in a tree where it rested securely. Bartunek emerged without a scratch.

THE CARLISLE MERCURY

VOLUME LXX. ESTABLISHED 1867 CARLISLE, NICHOLAS COUNTY, KY., THURSDAY, APRIL 23, 1936 PUBLISHED WEEKLY NUMBER 17

LONG AND USEFUL LIFE OF DR. SAM R. FISHER, 83, CLOSES

Prominent Physician Succumbs Saturday Following Brief Illness

PHYSICIAN 60 YEARS

Dr. Samuel Rogers Fisher, 83 years old, died Saturday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. O. R. Gaffin, near Headquarters, following a short illness with pneumonia. Dr. Fisher was removed from his home at Headquarters to the home of his daughter when he became ill.

Born in Carlisle in December, 1852, Dr. Fisher was the oldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose R. Fisher. After attending school in Carlisle, he attended medical school at Louisville and in 1876 graduated from the Ohio Medical School in Cincinnati.

In July 1876, Dr. Fisher bought out the office and equipment of Dr. Phillips at Headquarters and located there for the practice of his profession. He soon built up a heavy practice, which continued during the almost sixty years he practiced his profession at the same place.

During his more than half a century of practice, Dr. Fisher officiated at the births of and attended three or more generations.

A kindly, gentle, courteous gentleman, Dr. Fisher personified all of those fine traits of that beloved profession which has almost become extinct, the old country doctor. Never endowed with the best of health and with a frail body, Dr. Fisher nevertheless was always ready and willing to answer a call of distress. It has been said of him that the night was never too cold or too dark, the distance too great or the road too bad for him to go on his errand of mercy.

Up until his death, Dr. Fisher was still actively engaged in the practice of his profession. Although his home visits were not as numerous as during his younger years, he was kept busy with visits to his office. Up until his death he retained all of his faculties and was able to get around as well as many men twenty years younger.

The death of Dr. Fisher is not only a loss to the community in which he had lived and labored so long, but to the entire county, where he was widely known and loved.

Dr. Fisher had been a member of the Masonic fraternity for more than fifty years, having been awarded a life membership button by the Grand Lodge two years ago in recognition of more than fifty years membership. He had served as treasurer of Orient Lodge at Headquarters for more than half a century.

Dr. Fisher's wife, Mrs. Laura Kennard Fisher, died in September, 1926. He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Thomas M. Smith, New York City; Mrs. Oren R. Gaffin, Headquarters, and Mrs. C. O. Peratt, Morehead; five grandchildren and five great-grandchildren; two brothers, John I. Fisher, Louisville, and C. H. Fisher, Carlisle, and three brothers, Mrs. Sam K. Veach, Miss Lutie Fisher and Mrs. F. B. Henry, all of Carlisle.

Funeral services were held Monday morning at 10 o'clock at the Headquarters Methodist church, conducted by Rev. J. J. Whitehouse, pastor of the Carlisle Christian church, of which he was a life-long member, assisted by Rev. H. W. Landrith, and burial followed in the family lot in the Carlisle cemetery. Services at the grave were conducted by the Headquarters Masonic lodge.

Fire Destroys House In Stony Creek Section

$1,673.31 DELINQUENT

138 Property Owners Have Not Paid State Taxes

Sheriff J. Clarke Leer in this issue advertises for sale property upon which state and county taxes has not been paid, amounting to a total of $1,673.31. This is an unusually small amount of delinquent taxes, and many of the delinquents will pay before the day of sale.

The advertisement shows taxes delinquent on 138 pieces of property, of which 66 belong to colored people. The total amount of taxes owed by colored people is $466.11.

The heaviest delinquent list is in District No. 1, where $698.81 remains unpaid. However, two large tracts of land in that district are responsible for the large total. District No. 4 has but two tracts advertised, the smallest number of any district.

District No. 6, which comprises the city of Carlisle, has a total of $206.23 delinquent on 13 pieces of property.

$150 Prizes To Future Farmers

Money To Be Divided In Eight Prizes In Home Improvement Program

Citizens of Carlisle and Nicholas county have contributed approximately $150 to the Future Farmers Organization of the Carlisle high school to be used as prizes in the home improvement contest being conducted by the organization. The money has been raised through solicitation of the finance committee, composed of Glenn Clay, Henry Caswell and Charles Wood.

May Day To Be Child Health Day

Health And Security For Every Child To Be Theme This Year

"Health and Security for Every Child" is to be the central theme of the 1936 celebration of May Day—Child Health Day, the objective of which is the consideration, in each state and community, of measures for maternal and child health and for child welfare under the Social Security Act.

"At the request of the Conference of State and Provincial Health Authorities of North America, the May Day program sponsored in former years by the recently dissolved American Child Health Association, will," says Dr. Juanita McF. Jennings, May Day Chairman for Kentucky, "be organized this year by the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, in cooperation with other Federal agencies.

"Leadership in the states will be under the auspices of the state and local health officers, with organizations and agencies concerned with child health and child welfare participating in the program.

"The May Day—Child Health Day program this year will furnish an opportunity for each community to determine the needs of its own mothers and children, to consider the local agencies available to give maternal and child health and welfare services, and to canvass the local funds required for the extension of such services.

"The May Day program in Kentucky will, in many counties, be developed around the awarding of the Kentucky Blue Ribbon of Health to eligible children. Approximately 45,000 children will receive the Kentucky Blue Ribbon."

Chandler Asks O. K. Of Taxes

Governor Radiocasts Plea To The Assembly To Enact Proposed Bills

Gov. A. B. Chandler, in a radio address before a joint session of the General Assembly, Monday night appealed for support of his tax program by the people at large and its prompt enactment for speedy balancing of the state budget.

"The job can be done in two weeks," the Governor told the legislators. He declared his willingness to make "reasonable" changes in any of his tax bills if the general assembly would "stay in session" and "not plunge the state further into a financial crisis."

Decrying the "march" on the Capitol last Friday that accompanied the defeat of the Administration's tobacco tax bill in the House of Representatives, the Governor said he now had forty-four votes pledged in the House for a new cigarette tax measure.

"We'll get the rest of the necessary votes right away," he added.

If the tax measures pending and those to be introduced are enacted into laws, the necessary $12,500,000 in new revenue will be raised.

"Then," he added, "the state budget will be balanced, for the first time in twenty-five years, and sufficient revenue will be available for the orderly retirement of the state debt.

"If, on the other hand, any of these measures are rejected, or if they are materially modified, new revenue measures must be proposed."

Although Mr. Norton had been in ill health for several years, his condition was not considered serious, and he was at his post of duty at the Carlisle city school until a few days before his death.

Mr. Norton was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Norton, of the Jackstown section. He was born and reared and spent all of his life in Nicholas county. In early life he was engaged in farming and moved to Carlisle about 25 years ago.

He had been custodian at the Carlisle city school for about 15 years, and was loved and respected by the children and faculty of the school. M. for more than twenty years. He was a member of all of the Masonic organizations here.

Mr. Norton was one of the best known men in Nicholas county. Gentle, affable, kind and courteous, his friends were limited only by his acquaintances. His death was a shock to the entire community.

Mr. Norton was twice married, his first wife having died many years ago. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nannie Metcalfe Norton; two sons by a former marriage, R. L. Norton, Carlisle, and Hiram P. Norton, of the county; three grandchildren and one brother, Harvey C. Norton, Carlisle.

Tobacco Tax Bill Passage Predicted

Administration Leaders Confident Bill Will Be Brought Up Again

Passage this week of Governor Chandler's tobacco sales tax bill was predicted by administration leaders following a series of conferences. The House of Representatives refused Wednesday to approve the bill, adopting an unfavorable minority committee report by a vote of 61 to 23, in the governor's absence.

While the governor himself was non-committal upon his return to the capital other than to say he had not quit fighting as a result of his first revenue setback, legislative leaders close to him expressed confidence enough votes could be obtained to pass the bill on reconsideration this week. Fifty-one votes would be required to carry a motion for reconsideration.

Opponents of the proposed tax, who defeated the bill in the presence of a huge crowd of visitors, mainly from Louisville cigarette factories, were inclined to doubt the claims of administration leaders that the bill could be revived at this session.

Instead, they were casting about for a substitute program and some of their leaders voiced preference for a general sales tax with food and clothing exempted, and an increase in the production tax on whisky. Governor Chandler has expressed opposition to both of these proposals.

A charge that "selfish minority interest" tried to block his revenue program at Frankfort was hurled by Governor Chandler. Referring to the defeat of his tobacco products tax proposal in the house Thursday, Governor Chandler said "the setback was only temporary." He declared he was determined to disprove what he termed the fallacy that a state tax on tobacco products would injure the grower by reducing consumption.

Commenting on the mass demonstration at the capital against the proposal, Governor Chandler asserted "the expedition came well financed." He charged that backing the demonstration were warehousemen and four large tobacco concerns "which can pay their presidents million-dollar bonuses, but buy tobacco from Kentucky farmers for as little as they can."

The slaying of Shea occurred at the home where both lived in the East Union section, on April 11. Shea was killed instantly when he was shot in the head with a shotgun.

Reinsmith claims self-defense, declaring he shot his step-father after the latter had abused him and was advancing toward him with his hands in his pockets.

Son Held, Parents Freed In Connection With Fire

Henry Stanfield, 59, his wife and his son, H. B. Stanfield, 25, were arrested last week and charged with burning a house at Cowan, owned by Stanfield. At an examining trial before Judge Harry Wallingford at Flemingsburg, the son was ordered held to the grand jury and the parents were released.

The house, which was occupied by Dave Crawford and family, was burned to the ground shortly after midnight Saturday. The Crawford family were visiting relatives in Nicholas county and lost all of their household goods, clothing and personal effects.

Bloodhounds obtained by Fleming county officers Sunday followed a scent to the Stanfield home three miles away, it was reported. Crawford preferred the charges against the family, claiming they burned the house to collect $500 insurance.

Evidence was introduced at the examining trial to show that the younger Stanfield had bought some gasoline and matches at a store in Nicholas county on the afternoon before the fire.

Texas Men Purchase The Lexington Herald

Purchase of the Lexington Herald by J. Lindsay Nunn and his son, Gilmore N. Nunn, of Amarillo, Texas, was announced last Thursday afternoon. The agreement for the purchase was signed as the executors of the estate of Desha Breckinridge, who have been operating the paper since his death, transferred all of the common stock to the new owners.

The new owners will take charge of the paper within the next sixty days. It was announced that Tom R. Underwood would remain as editor of the paper and that there would be no changes in the staff.

J. Lindsay Nunn is a native of Shelbyville and both he and his son have had wide experience in the newspaper business, publishing several daily papers in Texas.

Out of conferences held at Washington Monday among administration leaders, planning procedure for the Democratic national convention at Philadelphia in June, developed the probability that Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, 1932 keynoter at Chicago, again will fill that role this year.

The selection will be made Saturday, when the sub-committee on arrangements meets at Philadelphia to complete plans for the convention, at which President Roosevelt will appear in person, according to present expectations.

58,295 Persons Enrolled In 3,309 Adult Education Classes In Kentucky, With 1,196 Teachers Employed

The extent to which the Works Progress Administration in Kentucky has entered upon almost untouched fields of education through its Emergency Education Program is expressed in a recent report from that division to George H. Goodman, administrator.

A total of 58,296 enrollees are attending 3,309 various classes under the supervision of 1,196 otherwise unemployed teachers. The classes extend from nursery schools through literacy education, vocational training, parent education to general adult education. The entire program is under the direct supervision of George L. Evans, an educator of long experience and outstanding ability in the state.

Educational projects for relief clients now are operating in 117 out of 120 counties of Kentucky. In three counties there were no eligible unemployed teachers, therefore no projects have been started.

The nursery projects are probably the most popular of the entire series, due to important results obtained almost immediately. A total of 4,110 children of pre-school age attend, daily, ninety-three classes under the supervision of 203 teachers.

Children arriving at the nursery schools in the morning are given a thorough inspection for colds or any other disease. A doctor is immediately called for any child found to be sick. Immediately after the morning inspection the children are placed in classes according to their respective ages. This period is followed by a well supervised play period and a lunch of fruit juice, milk and a dose of cod liver oil. The lunch is followed by rest and an outdoor play period, after which there is a song period. At noon a well balanced hot lunch is served at a cost of twelve cents per child. After the noon lunch the children are put to bed for an hour in individual beds, after which they are returned to their homes.

With the exception of one state Kentucky has the highest percentage of native born white adult illiteracy of any other state in the Union. In full recognition of this fact the Works Progress Administration has placed 173 teachers teaching 4,932 relief enrollees in 682 classes to read and write. The administration is not satisfied with merely teaching a grown person to read and write his own name, but goes further and makes of the enrollee a person who can read a newspaper or other periodical with understanding and who can carry on for himself to a higher level of culture.

Seventy-nine teachers are working in the field of vocational training with 5,586 enrollees in 265 classes. In this field assistance is given in advancing the training of those who will profit in an economic way, as well as profiting from the knowledge gained and the pride of accomplishment.

Six hundred and five teachers supervise 35,720 enrollees in 1,842 classes for general adult education. Almost every field and subject commonly touched in educational work is included under this heading.

Under the heading of parent education 136 teachers are laboring in 427 classes with 8,148 enrollees in an effort to assist in lifting the level of parenthood and the standards of living in the homes of relief clients.

The Federal Government, through the Works Progress Administration, is spending approximately $70,000 monthly in Kentucky on its Emergency Education Program. Federal and state officials alike look upon the program as an effort of far reaching and lasting effect upon the cultural future of the Commonwealth.
