AN UNLOADED GUN.

(Lexington Herald)

An "unloaded" .22 rifle, fired by a playmate, caused the death of an eight-year-old child in Carlisle recently. After the child felt his companion, also a very young child, take from the house crying "I didn't know it was loaded . . ."

How many children have been killed with "unloaded guns" in Kentucky?

The sympathy of the entire state extends not only to the bereaved family of the child whose life has been lost but also to the child who did not know the gun was loaded. Such accidents of course do not place blame on those who are the innocent causes of them.

Yet this kind of thing with proper care can be prevented. Guns simply must not be left around where children can get their hands on them.

MORE ORCHIDS TO CCC

(Winchester Sun)

One of the valuable byproducts of the CCC program seems to have been a great gain in the campaign to conserve wild life resources of America.

Director Robert Fechner reports that the CCC work actually has helped the conservation program to such an extent that certain species of migratory birds, supposedly doomed to extinction, now are expected to survive and increase in numbers.

The CCC, for instance, has helped the U. S. Biological Survey to expand and develop a nation-wide system of wild life refugees. It has helped other government services to set aside wilderness areas for game. It has aided in federal wild life inventories, has improved fishing conditions, has fed animals and birds in cold weather, and, by its reforesting activities, has provided a vast amount of much-needed cover for wild life.

Just one more reason for writing the CCC down as one of the very best of the New Deal experiments.

To clean good cut glass a soft brush is necessary. The brush gets into all of the crevices that are not reached by the usual washing methods.

HIGH SALARIES

(Exchange)

The recent announcement by the Ways and Means Committee of the National House of Representatives of salaries paid to all corporation employees in the country receiving $15,000 a year or more disclosed some very interesting facts regarding the puy envelopes of people whose names are often in the newspaper headlines.

Mae West, movie actress, for instance, was paid $320,000 for twelve months' work—more than four times the salary of President Roosevelt. On the other hand, the wife of the President received only $10,000 for her services as contributing editor of a publishing company.

Filmdom was generously represented among the top salaries. Charles Chaplin drew $1,670,000, Walt "Mickey Mouse" Disney $51,500, and Constance Bennett $176,000. Claudette Colbert was rated at $85,000, Gary Cooper $120,000, Marlene Dietrich $145,000, Sylvia Sydney $110,000, Cecil de Mille $125,000, Wesley Ruggles $120,000 and B. P. Schulberg $115,000.

Newspaper men did remarkably well. William Randolph Hearst led all the rest with a salary of $300,000. Col. Frank Knox $75,000, Joseph Pulitzer $134,500, Arthur Brisbane $265,000, the late Sidney Smith cartoonist, $120,000, and Walter Winchell a mere $50,000.

Edsell Ford, surprisingly enough was listed at only $92,000. Henry L. Doherty, utilities magnate, received $100,000. S. S. Kresge received $167,000. Guy Lombardo $250,000, George W. Hill tobacco company official, $153,000. Conde Nast $429,999, the Mills brothers $30,000 each, Daniel Willard, railroad president, $60,000 several insurance company officials $100,000 or more, Manager Mickey Cochran of the champion Detroit Tigers, $31,000, and there was a long list of officials of industrial corporations who received $100,000 to $200,000 each.

Scores of occupations were represented in the list, and in some of these occupations hundreds of individuals were listed as receiving $15,000 a year or more. The number of persons in the list and the wide variety of methods by which they attained such financial prominence not only prove the truth of the old adage that "there's always room at the top," but indicate that there's more than one way to go to the top. The days of opportunity in America are not over.

THE FARM AND HOME

Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station

Poultry, as well as all other kinds of livestock, appreciate slightly warm water in winter. In fact, maximum egg production can be obtained only when fresh, clean water, with the chill taken off, is put before the hens in clean vessels.

Bituminous or soft coal usually gives the best results when a deep fuel bed is maintained. Stir up the fire and get it hot before adding new fuel. Before putting in coal, push the partly burned fuel back to the sides of the fire-box, leaving a hole for the new charge.
