Local Man Returns From Sales School

Allie T. Clinkenbeard, of The Variety Store, this city, a representative of the Electrolux Air Cooled Refrigerator and Electrolux dealers, has just returned from a two weeks' course at Swan Evansville, Indiana, where he attended the Servel, Inc. Electrolux Refrigerator Sales School. The school lasted from Monday, February 10th through Feb. 14th, 1936.

"With a large number of other dealer representatives present from all parts of the country," said Mr. Clinkenbeard, I took a complete course of instruction on the sale and installation of the new 1935 air-cooled Electrolux. This enabled me to minutely inspect every part and of the new refrigerator being marketed in the vicinity, and to learn each and every phase of its installation and operation. The experience obtained in my week at the School and the knowledge I gained there will be of value here locally to our many Electrolux owners and to those who are in the market for a new refrigerator."

World cotton production in 1935-36 is estimated at 25,606,000 bales.

BAPTIST NOTES

R. B. Cooey, minister

One hundred twelve at prayer meeting last Wednesday. The poor greatly appreciates this expression of loyalty and interest in them. God will do great things for us and through us if we remain humble and spend much time in prayer. Let's work for the lost world. No church, nation or individual ever goes to perdition on its knees.

Much interest is being shown in the series of sermons on the home courtship and marriage and the home life. The pastor will bring us his Sunday night message in this series, "Courtship, A Joke Or A Sacrament." The young people are all on the town and community are invited to attend these Sunday services. The sermons should be preferred to all who are trying to make a happy home and community. All regular services on next Sunday.

SPRATHER HALL

There is not a single instance in all the printed records of any Easter ever offering assurance to Christ. They knew Him, and had fear and grief for Him, even many of them; though they could not submit to Him from the heart. What a comfort it is to the Lord's people to know that all the powers of evil are under the control of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The devil-controlled mortal of all mortals presents a picture of many living in these days, upon whose lives Satan has a similar hold. In spite of their pride and self-love they pursue the sins that lead to the paths of self-degradation, self-torture and ruin, and all their self-chosen paths are paths of defilement, self-degredation and injury. The devil is a hard master, and he holds a ferocious grip on his victims.

The Jews was forbidden in the law of Moses because they were unclean animals, so the Lord Jesus was quite justified in being the cause of their destruction. Behold there was a fitness in furnishing the Christian demons with unclean habitation.

METHODIST CHURCH

VOLUME LXX. ESTABLISHED 1867 CARLISLE, NICHOLAS COUNTY, KY., THURSDAY. FEBRUARY 27, 1936 PUBLISHED WEEKLY NUMBER 9

GOVERNMENT REFORM BILL PRESENTED AS LEGISLATURE MEETS

Measure Drafted By Committee Presented Special Assembly Session

ONE MAN COMMISSION

Creation of a one man highway commission with nine "advisory commissioners" from the various congressional districts, and establishment of a department of business relations with a salesperson authority are among the principal provisions of the governmental reorganization bill made public last Wednesday night by Governor Chandler.

The bill drafted by the governor's special reorganization commission and submitted to the chief executive for his approval was presented to the general assembly when it convened in extraordinary session.

The commission that drafted the bill was headed by former Governor J. C. W. Beckham, present chairman of the state parole service commission who, in the event he retains that position, would head the department of business relations provided in the bill.

Designed, according to its title, to "simplify the departments of the state government for the purpose of providing for better service and economy," the bill seeks to centralize executive authority in the governor and makes all administrative agencies responsible to him. It calls for creation of a legislative council to study the personnel needs of the various state agencies with a view to effecting economy and efficiency.

Seven constitutional administrative departments, nine statutory commissions, 14 boards and six independent agencies are provided for in the bill.

Twenty-one existing offices and agencies would be abolished or have their identity changed, terms of the bill, but in most instances they would be continued under new divisions.

The bill provides for salaries of $5,000, $1,500 or $4,000 for most executive employees of the state.

The various constitutional executive offices provided for are: The governor, the department of state, law, treasury, agriculture, labor statistics, education, and military affairs.

The statutory administrative offices provided for are: Revenue, highways, welfare, health, industrial relations, business regulation, conservation and library.

Independent agencies provided for are: Auditor of public accounts, legislative council, board of election commissioners, state road commission, state racing commission, state parole board, commission.

The following offices and agencies are abolished or merged with other departments under provisions of the bill:

State athletic board of control, budget commission, commission for crippled children's commission, George Rogers Clark memorial commission, board of trustees, Kentucky Confederate home, board of trustees of defective Davis memorial, state livestock sanitary board, the Kentucky Home commission, Kentucky national park commission, state forestry commission of Kentucky, commissioners of the Perryville battlefield, Kentucky progress commission, board of visitors for Kentucky school for the blind, board of commissioners for the Kentucky school for the deaf, state planning board, state inspector and examiner, department of mines and minerals, department of banks and securities, state highway commission, board of welfare and the executive cabinet.

Under the bill the state highway department would be administered by a commissioner of highways "who shall have full charge of the administration of the department," and receive $5,000 a year. Nine other members would be appointed, representing each congressional district, at salaries of $5,000 a year plus expenses. The commissioner, with the approval of the governor, would appoint a chief engineer at $5,000 a year. The nine members would be known as "advisory commissioners" and their duties would be "to ascertain the condition of the state highways in their respective districts and the highway needs of said districts and to acquaint the commissioner of highways from time to time as to such conditions and needs."

Meetings would be held quarterly or oftener.

The nine advisory commissioners would have "no administrative authority or responsibility in the operation of the department of highways."

The bill sets up a laboratory of criminal identification under the department of public safety in the Kentucky crippled children's commission, the Kentucky children's home society, the Kentucky home society for crippled children, the home for incurables, the colored hospital of the Red Cross Association and trusteeship of the Kentucky Confederate Home.

At the head of the department would be a commissioner of welfare, "and advised by a board of welfare composed of five 'eminent Kentuckians' appointed by the governor, and paid a salary of $10 a day for each day on duty. Duties of the board would be "to consider and advise with the commissioner of welfare on matters of policy and administration."

House Approves AAA Farm Aid Measure

Voting down hopelessly all amendments except those approved by administration leaders, the House Friday passed the New Deal $500,000,000 AAA substitute bill by a 267 to 97 record ballot.

The action returned the measure to the Senate. Since that branch already has enacted an almost identical bill, leaders in both bodies predicted a prompt rubber-stamp adjustment of differences that would speed the legislation to the White House.

As adopted by the House it would stimulate that the Secretary of Agriculture must seek to keep production at a level approximating 1928 to 1929 production, even while aiming at the 1909-1914 pre-war parity for farmers' income.

Both the Senate and House bills as originally passed would amend the P&S soil erosion act to appropriate up to a total of a billion dollars a year in subsidies to farmers.

Thieves Visit Kirkland Store

Small Amount Of Merchandise, Check, $8 Cents Found Obtained At Store

Gaining entrance by breaking out a window in the rear basement, thieves entered the store of R. T. Kirkland Friday night and stole a small amount of money and merchandise valued at around $8.00, it is said.

The theft was discovered when the store was opened Saturday morning. The cash register was broken open and $2.50 in cents in change and the check to the cash register had been stolen.

Mr. Kirkland said most of the goods in the store had been covered with, but a check of the merchandise showed the loss of nine pairs of low shoes, one pair of work shoes, a sheep lined coat, and a few sweaters, all men's apparel.

Saturday morning a cheap watch, part of a package of cigarettes and a large number of razor blades were found at the door entrance was made.

Chandler To Approve Local Option Measure

Gov. A. B. Chandler said Monday he would sign the local option prohibition bill.

The measure provides that on petition in Kentucky of 25 per cent registered voters, any county, city, town, district or precinct may call a special election to decide if the sale of liquor may be sold.

The time of election could be specified in the petition or be set by the county judge to take place between sixty and ninety days after filing with the clerk of the county court.

A local option election could not be held on the same day as a regular election within two years preceding or following a regular election. Each unit would be required to hold a separate election and separate election could be called oftener than once in three years. The bill provides any governmental unit or subdivision prohibit sale of beverages containing more than 1 per cent alcohol.

Transcript Rumored Time To Capitol Stenographer

Mrs. Louise Bush, stenographer in the office of Governor Chandler, was a one-time richer Tuesday as a transient when she became involved two years ago in a debt to her.

She approached Mrs. Bush two years ago when she was a stenographer in the office of the comptroller of the treasury department.

"I'm Patrick Murphy, a friend of Governor Chandler," he said referring to the then governor. "Could you spare me a dime?"

Mrs. Bush obliged and forgot the incident.

Tuesday the transient returned the dime.

Mrs. Bush said she will keep it as a souvenir.
