Quilt Pieced By Slave At Moorefield In 1825

Mrs. Margaret Ward, of Cincinnati, sent to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Fulton, a clipping from the Cincinnati Times-Star, which showed a design of a quilt, and an illustration of the quilting. The quilt is said was made in this county 110 years ago. The paper said:

"By candlelight, 110 years ago, Mary Williams, negro slave on Long Reedell, Ky., pieced the above quilt, now a part of the Times-Star's quilt show, at the Greater Cincinnati Woman's Exposition, Music Hall. A great grandson of the slave, Henry Williams, Terrace Park, treasures the quilt as a gift from the Johnson family and has won many prizes with it. When he was a passenger for the American consul, J. K. Pollard, at Monrovia, Liberia, he went first prize in a quilt show with the quilt. He later won a prize with it at Hale of the Arts, deeply into the right side of his neck.

He was married by Dr. Hunyon of Ewing and by Ben Allen of Flemingsburg. Ten stitches were required to close the wound. Physicians said that if the ax had cut a trifle further, death would have been certain. As it is, he is getting along nicely.

OLD KENTUCKY
Corn Meal
LIKE ALL OF OUR PRODUCTS
is gaining favor over a large territory. We exercise the same care in the selection and preparation of the corn used in making our meal as we do in the wheat which makes White Rose Flour.
We use only select white corn, generally in the ear, which is shelled, cleaned and scoured and is ground in a manner which keeps the meal in a pure and sweet condition.
Nothing is taken from the whole grain of corn except the bran, which is sifted out over a machine of our own make, and this operation insures lively, tasty meal instead of the soggy, clammy kind with which perhaps you have had some experience.

Before Christ Jesus could proclaim the Kingdom of the Heavens, it was necessary that Satan should be cast out and overcome. Adam was in no need of food, yet he sinned. Christ was famished from a forty day fast, yet He withstood the temptation, to provide Himself with food. Adam was in a beautiful garden, the head of all creation on earth, yet he yielded to Satan. Christ was in a wilderness among the wild beasts, yet He refused to obey Satan though even though it should give Him the headship, even though it was already rightfully His. Adom questioned God's goodness and offended Him by trying to get that which He withheld. Our Lord refused to flout His love, though every token of it seemed to have vanished.
