Drive On Poultry Thefts Is Planned

The board of directors of the Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association, meeting at Lexington and Friday, in connection with the annual poultry short course of the Agricultural Experiment Station, voted to cooperate in a statewide drive to curb chicken stealing.

Poultry raisers will be urged to use a system of tattooing wherein by a brand is placed in the web of a bird's wing. Law enforcement officers then will be furnished the brands of all cooperating farmers. This system is said to be doing much in other states to put an end to stealing, as it makes it practically impossible to sell stolen birds.

E. L. Ackert, field agent for the Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association, said the tattooing method is simple and inexpensive. The brand, he said, will not injure the livestock. Large signs furnished to farmers cooperating in the plan, he said, warn thieves that their stock is protected.

20 NAMED IN SUIT

Suit to orecover $91,005 from 29 incorporators of the defunct Louisville Daily News and Enquirer, was filed in federal court at Louisville last week by Herman M. Kessler, trustee in bankruptcy. Now heavy-hued stays and Hyde goes through

To see his soul in black winged night

With fiendish who feel the witches brew.

In his experiment with colors Lenses as an analogue. Dr. H. I. Fisher, of Chicago, has injured the poison into the skin small? Much, he says, depends on the color of the poison. If it is green, he has experienced a marked relief of pain.

In the summer time, change in the rate and direction of wind blowing to Carlisle and other population centers from the Ohio river valley has been established as a fact, although unexplained but no official explanation has been made by the weather bureau. According to the records kept by the bureau for several years, the wind will shift in a southerly direction from the Ohio river and will be delivered here by truck, according to the report. Just what will be put in operation, with this much said was duly.

During the severe cold weather of last winter, the minute hand on the front side of the court house clock dropped off and has never been replaced. Less of the hand has caused no end of worry, as much to that large number of people who depend upon the court house clock for their time.

The time is given on the north, east and west sides, but on the south side it is impossible to tell the time. The hand surely will be restored soon.

Ernest E. Rowe, district supervisor of Public Works Administration for this district, met with the fiscal court and city officials Wednesday to discuss the proposed employment of a worker to certify eligibles for service on WPA projects. According to Mr. Rowe, only those persons who have been certified under the old relief setup are eligible for employment on WPA projects, and no more can be employed unless a local agency is set up to investigate and certify those persons who have become destitute since the local office ceased operations. No definite action was taken at the meeting.

Mrs. John Neeley, who lives on the Flemingsburg road, near Carlisle, stated to The Mercury Tuesday that she had suffered embarrassment through the prevalence of the opinion that she is not the legal wife of John Neal (or Neely) who was arrested last week on a charge of desertion and warrant from Floyd county and later escaped. Mrs. Neeley displayed a minister's certificate, signed by Rev. Silas Brown, which showed that Lona Hoover and John Neeley were united in marriage by him on June 15, 1929, and that the license was issued by I. A. Smiley, county clerk of Floyd county. Mrs. Neeley stated that her husband is divorced from his first wife and requested that The Mercury publish the above facts.
