THE GARDEN

CHINESE CABBAGE

(By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture.)

Chinese cabbage or "celery cabbage" is another vegetable that makes it bids for attention as a fall garden, possibility to make good the loss the regular garden has sustained because of the present difficult season. Unlike broccoli, Brussels sprouts and even collards which must have been started while the season was still unfavorable, Chinese cabbage need not be sown until late July or early August, with at least that much hot weather past, and with just that much less nursing of the seedlings.

Chinese cabbage is a greens crop. Accordingly, it needs high fertility and humus-laden soil. The best way to prepare for it is to spade under a generous coat of well-rotted manure. Thus, two purposes are served; the soil will have been made spongy, capable of holding moisture and even bringing up deep-soil moisture, and nitrogen will have been added. The time to get ready is now, spading the soil as deeply as possible, breaking fine any clods there may be, and finishing with a rake and tamping firmly. Then, where the row of Chinese cabbage is to stand, boards or even heavy paper should be laid. After two weeks or so, the seed should be sown. At this time it will be found that a quite unbelievable amount of moisture will have risen and the seed will sprout. It is best to use seed generously, so as to be sure of a stand of 12 to 15 inches after the surplus seedlings are removed.

Another way to start Chinese cabbage is to prepare the ground as above but to be ready about two weeks later, the seedlings meanwhile raised in a bed that is shaded much of the day, particularly after noon. The seedlings will be set with water and they will need further watering to become fully established, but, set so late, August 15-25, the fall rains will be just much much closer, to carry the plants to maturity.

Pe Tsai is the best variety for Kentucky.

The pest that bother ordinary cabbage may trouble Chinese cabbage, too. One is the green cabbage worm, whose control is to dust or spray with arsenate of lead until the time the cabbage begins to head. Once heading sets in, switch should be made to dust or spray carrying rotenone, deadly stomach poison for cabbage worms and other chewing insects, not harmless to human beings.

Another pest is the cabbage louse. Rotenone dust or spray on applied as to strike the lice is one control; tobacco dust or spray is another. Tobacco concentrate, Black Leaf 40, used as the manufacturers designate on the container, or "tea" made by steeping fresh tobacco in water may be used as the spray. The tobacco that made by the commercial concentrate, and sold under the name of "nicotine sulphate dust" is the dust to use with lime than crumbled tobacco as some persons have tried. "I per cent" is just as best.

Another pest is the Harlequin cabbage bug, the gaudy three-cornered hardshelled insect that sometimes overruns late cabbage and related greens. After it has attained full growth, it is active and out mates it impossible to kill by any means that would not also kill the Chinese cabbage as well, but it can be hand-picked with relatively no trouble if it is done early in the morning. Better, to watch closely, and when the soft bodied infant insects are seen, dust or spray with rotenone or tobacco, taking pains to have the material strike the insects direct. Killing is effected in 30 minutes or less, in hot weather.

Famous Biblical Leader To Write Church Feature

Harold L. Lundquist, dean of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, and one of the most widely known Biblical authorities in the country, has assumed the task of preparing the popular "Uniform Lesson" which appears regularly in The Mercury.

Dean Lundquist succeeds Rev. P. H. Fitzwater, veteran writer and Biblical student, who also is a member of this Moody Bible institute staff. Dr. Fitzwater's review and interpretation of the International Sunday School lesson has been a feature of these newspapers for the past 25 years. It has grown in popularity through the years, winning a following which has been termed "the largest Sunday School class in the world."

Dean Lundquist is particularly well-equipped to carry on the work he so long relinquished to Dr. Fitzwater. He is a graduate of the University of Minnesota, where he trained and a member of the for. He attended Princeton Theological Seminary, and was graduated with the first class completing the pastors' course at Moody Institute.

To round out a life of varied experience, he has had army training to supplement his legal and theological education. He is very popular as a speaker and as a teacher of men's Bible classes.

You will find Dean Lundquist's exposition of the Sunday School Lesson extraordinary illuminating and helpful. Watch for it in this paper each week.

Still Time To Grow Vegetable And Feed Crops

There is still time to grow many garden vegetables, points out a statement from the Kentucky College of Agriculture. The usual late varieties of cabbage, such as Louisville Drumhead and Hallhead, may be set until August 1, the All-Seasons to August 15, and such varieties as Copenhagen and Golden Acre after that date.

Several kinds of beans will mature in 50 days including String less Green Pod, Bountiful, Valentine, Pencil Pod Black Wax, and Brittle Wax, all grown in Kentucky. The famous Kentucky Wonder will mature in 65 days, as also will the Missouri Wonder, another pole bean that is coming in favor in Kentucky. The Missouri Wonder is ivory white, and therefore favored by many people as a shell and dry bean.

Early Adams and other early varieties of sweet corn may still mature, under favorable conditions. Turnips, beets, carrots and kale may be produced in abundance.

So far as feed crops are concerned, sudan grass and millet will make good hay, under favorable moisture conditions. Seed should be sown thinly drilled at the rate of a bushel and a half to the acre.

Sudan grass drilled at the rate of 25 pounds to the acre should yield good hay or fall pasture. Millet sown as late as August 1, under favorable conditions should produce a ton of hay to the acre. German millet is the kind usually grown in Kentucky, but Hungarian probably is better for late seeding.

The Kentucky Experiment Station recommends that a liberal acreage of rye or barley be seeded in late August or early September. These will furnish good fall and early winter grazing and will save hay. Many dairymen do not like rye, and on good land they have just as satisfactory a rye.

It is further recommended by the Experiment Station that, in order that pastures may be available next spring, the practice of seeding grasses this fall be followed more extensively than in the past. Orchard grass can be sown in the early seeded grasses, and timothy and redtop in the later seeded grasses. Fall seeding permits pasture to give a stand than spring seeding, and grasses needed this fall will furnish considerable pasturage next year, particularly if legumes are sown with or legume is added in the spring.

State School Offers Advantages To Blind

The Kentucky School for the Blind, at Louisville, Kentucky provides for the visually handicapped children of the state full educational opportunities from Kindergarten through an accredited High School.

Boys and girls without sight or whose sight is so defective as to prevent them from attending Public Schools are eligible to the privileges of education and in good health, instruction is always given in vocal and instrumental music, industrial, vocational occupations and physical training. There is no charge for Tuition, Board, Laundry or Books.

There are separate schools for white and colored children, some trained teachers with its own staff of teachers.

The state has endeavored to provide for these schools everything they should be for the education, and welfare of the blind white children of Kentucky.

The buildings are beautifully situated, the grounds with magnificent forest trees and filled with flowers, and there is given to be training of the blind. The teachers are those that can be and thoroughly experienced in teaching those who cannot see. Opportunity is provided for those qualified to pursue higher studies in order to take advantage of work in music or vocational schools.

The school session opens the second Wednesday of September and closes the second Wednesday in June, the children going to their homes for the summer vacation.

If you know of such a child, write to Miss Catherine T. Moriarty, Superintendent, Kentucky School For The Blind, 1867 Frankfort Avenue, Louisville, Kentucky.

HANGING OUT THE WASH

Hot summer ironing can be made much easier by taking a little time and care in hanging out the family wash to dry. Sheets, towels and pillow cases that come off the line buttoned make ironing easy, for they can be dropped to stretch corners and "ridge" folded creases in sheets and tablecloths. Much difficult ironing can be eliminated by hanging things by the line some eight to 12 inches apart. Never hang any articles by the tips of the corners. Sheets, for instance, should be folded carefully right side out, hem to hem, and hung on the line so that the hemmed edges hang over the line some eight to 12 inches. The result is a smooth, square piece, easy to fold and just as easy to iron. Pillow cases, towels, etc., can be hung in the same way. In fact there is a right way and a wrong way to hang every piece of wash.

Changes Made In Farm Program

Changes have been made in the Agricultural Conservation Program in an effort to help farmers adjust their operations to meet the emergency caused by the drouth.

One of these modifications relates to the minimum acreage of soil-conserving crops. Formerly, if a farmer did not have a conserving acreage at least equal to the sum of 15 per cent of his general soil-depleting base and 20 per cent of his tobacco soil-depleting base, a deduction was made from the total amount of the Class I and Class II payments.

Now, if a farmer falls short of the minimum acreage required, a deduction will be made only from the Class II payment. That is, the farmer will be paid for the soil-building practices carried out without being required to have any given percentage of the land on his farm devoted to soil-conserving crops.

The above modification does not affect the soil-building allowance, nor the limit which it places upon the amount of the Class II payment.

Another modification provides that land from which wheat is harvested in 1936, which is grown in combination with or immediately followed by a legume, will be classified as one-half used for soil-conserving crops for the purpose of meeting requirements for minimum soil-conserving acreage and new seedings of soil-conserving crops. The entire acreage from which wheat is harvested in 1936 still is considered as soil-depleting, however, for all other purposes of the program. The change will enable those producers who have not been able to seed soil-conserving crops this year on land other than the wheat acreage to receive credit for such crops seeded in wheat. Also seeded cut for hay in Kentucky will be classified this year as soil-conserving if this crop is followed by a winter cover crop. In this state, acreage diverted to soybean hay previously was classified as soil-depleting.

Lesson for July 26

CHRISTIANITY SPREAD BY PERSECUTION

LESSON TEXT—Acts 7:59-8:4; 1 Peter 4:12-19.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life.—Revelation 2:10.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Was Not Afraid.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Stories the Undaunted Christians and Senior Topic—Persecution—The Cost of Service.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Modern Martyrs of Persecution.

Leaders of contemporary thought and observers of modern life every the evident decadence of old-fashioned virtues. Our times are too materialistic, encouraging young people to strive for worldly success rather than high and noble character.

In a time when expediency is the ruling principle, it is well for Christians to emphasize the fact that Jesus through all the years called for that loyalty to convictions which has caused some who bear his name to be willing to die for him, yea, even to live and to suffer for him, for sometimes it may be harder to die the latter than the former. True followers of our Lord are willing.

I. To Die for the Faith (7:54-8:1). Stephen, one of the first seven chosen as deacons of the church, "a man full of faith and of the Holy Spirit" (6:5), having been called before the Sanhedrin to answer false charges (6:8-15), faithfully stands for the truth. His indictment of Israel cuts to the heart. In anger his hearers stone him to death. He is the first martyr of the Christian Church, that holy succession which has represented all the ages through manhood and womanhood of today, as Jesus, the John and Betty Stam, to die rather than to deny Christ.

Note that as he was Stephen was given a vision of his risen and ascended Lord (vs. 55). Standing on the right hand of God to welcome his faithful servant. He prayed for those who took his life (v. 60). How like Christ! Such prayer was answered in the subsequent life of the apostle Paul, who was converted by unto his death.

Not to die with Jesus Christ comes the call to face death for him, for all should be determined.

II. To Live for the Faith (8:2-4). The early Church found that living for Christ entailed bitter persecution. Not even the sanctity of the home was inviolable. Their persons and property felt the hard hand of home-making Saul, yet we find no intimation of complaint. Rather they were driven from home and scattered abroad, but the result was the establishing of gospel centers wherever they went. Lawless Saul came for daily victims, for more than steadily bearing the responsibility of life. Not to preachers and Bible teachers alone is this sacred duty given, to be discharged in the church or on the street, but to social service, good be returned, but "pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you" (Matt. 5:44).

Are we who are now "scattered abroad" going "everywhere preaching" and are we suffering?

III. To Suffer for the Faith (1 Pet. 4:12-19).

1. We are not to be surprised by suffering (v. 12). Even in very fiery trials, for blessings will follow. The Lord proves his children, as gold is proved in tests gold to cleanse it, to prove its worth, and not to destroy it. God's testing is for the purpose worthy.

2. We are so to live as not to suffer for our misdeeds (vs. 15, 16). Many are they who would have the world believe they suffer for Christ's sake when they are but meeting the just recompense for their evil deeds. It is a shame to suffer as an evildoer, but an honor and privilege to suffer for Jesus' sake.

3. Believers are to make their sufferings a testimony (vs. 17-19). If we as Christians must needs be purged in order to be fitted for God's service and the glory that is to come, what will be the end of those who "know not God and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ" (II Thess. 1:7, 8)? Peter refrains from even mentioning what their ultimate end will be, but the writer to the Thessalonians goes on to say that they shall be "punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." Solemn words are these. Have we, and those to whom we minister, heeded their warning?

Real Character of Man

It is the relaxation of security; it is in the expansion of prosperity; it is in the love of dilution of the heart, and of its softening into festivity and pleasure, that the real character of men is discerned.—Burke.

"Never," he replied dutifully. "But I would hate to have anyone tempt me with a good car."

Editor Enjoys Visit To Dougherty Lodge

E. D. Sammie, editor of the Maysville Bulletin, Journal, in a lengthy article concerning the recent visit of Masons held here, has the following to say concerning the meeting and dinner for the Grand Officers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Ross:

If proficiency awards were made to ladies and other organizations because of the excellence of the programs rendered the first prize might easily be awarded to Dougherty lodge No. 69, Carlisle, and other Lodges comprising the 30th Masonic district. As had been previously announced in the Journal, a district meeting was held in the city of Carlisle in the form of a fourth degree Ladies' Night on the evening of Wednesday, July 8. The large attendance, the excellence of the degree work, make it stand out as one of the best meetings held this year.

Dinner was served at about 5:45, and what a dinner it was! And how each of us did enjoy the country ham, the smothered fried chicken, tomato salad, and all the other good things to eat. There may have been a time in our lives when we ate more than we did on this occasion, but we are not able at this time to recall such a time. We took our time, no embarrassment and without the least bit of conflict, for there was no unnecessary rushing. Each one present more than enough any dinner than we did this one for the reason that the host of Judge Rass and his splendid wife. No matter how large the family is where fortune may take us or how scarce money may be, we feel that here is one of the delightful event. We enjoyed Mr. and Mrs. Ross' fine hospitality, courtesy, cordiality and cheer of Kentucky hospitality and we feel that we should be privileged to enjoy their companionship and another of their splendid dinners.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION YEAR

(Elizabethtown News)

Presidential election years have always been regarded as good years for business, but the first five months of 1936 have been better than any corresponding period for the past five years. The low point in business was reached when President Roosevelt was inaugurated on March 4, 1933, and business improved since. Freight carloadings for the first five months of 1936 are higher than in any similar period since 1929. Steel production is on such a rate that the steel companies are now making money instead of losing money. Light and power production for the first five months of 1936 is higher than it has ever been in the country's history. Automobile production is the best production top every year since 1929.

Secretary of Commerce Roper, in a recent address said that the national income was $55,000,000,000 fifty-three billion dollars, contrasted with thirty-nine billion, five hundred million dollars in 1932, to which it had dropped from seventy-one billion dollars in 1929.

The only menace to the country today is not the Presidential election but the drought. President Roosevelt in his New Deal policies, was faced with a national with and surmounted the drought of 1934. With the country naturally in much better condition this year than it was two years ago, it can reasonably be concluded that the drought, while costly and serious, will not be utterly destructive of the country's progress to recovery.

Appomattox post office was once called Surrender.

Registration Expected To Bring Out Record Vote

It is required that all voters vote in the primary election on August 1 under provision of the Kentucky Registration law.

Books will be made for voters to register at the regular voting places in the precincts of the county on the day of the primary. Voters will be registered by two registrars who will be appointed by the county court clerk. Registration books will be open from the voter will then be required to vote in the primary or at all other elections. No further registration is required unless the voter moves from the precinct in which he is registered. In each case the voter can have his registration changed by reporting to the county clerk's office and requesting that the record be changed.

Because of the double duty to be performed on election day it is pointed out that voters should visit the polling places as early as possible in order to avoid delay in being registered.

Those who do not register at the regular polling place on August 1 may register at the office of the county clerk on any day between August 15 and October 1.

Two registration cards must be made out for each voter by the registration clerks, one an original and the other a copy. The voter will be required to supply the following information: name, address, occupation, party affiliation, age, length of residence in precinct, other means of identification. The voter is required to sign both the original and copy.
