FAITH

(Alice G. Erskine)

No lowly creature of the earth
But carries in its heart
That vital faith in Fatherlove
Of creations plan a part.
The sparrow seeks with loving trust
Her children's daily bread.
The deepest streams sometimes run low,
The fishes feel no dread.
The humble turtle in her house,
Who knows no anxious pain,
Is quite instinctively
In the certainty of rain.

Whilst men, with tortured anxious
Viewing the withered leaf,
With cautious voices pray for rain,
Deeffie their unbelief.
