NOCTURNE OF THE MOCKING BIRD

(Frances Elliott)

I listened to an eager mocking bird,
A harlequin of gay, nocturnal lays
The earth and sky were shaken by his trills
In melodies whose cadences occurred
As ripples while his downy wing beats stirred
The night breezes until they danced like fays.

I listened to an eager mocking bird,
A harlequin of gay, nocturnal lays
He loved a note as lightly as a word
That sings memories of fragrant days
And dusty loveliness of wildrose days
And as his elfin rhapsody reeled
I listened to an eager mocking bird.
