THE GARDEN

LATE FALL GARDENS

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture

The falling of rain quite generally during the past few weeks has given new impetus to putting gardens into production again. In recoup losses met earlier this summer. Unfortunately, the list of vegetable possibilities is dwindling, but there are still a few left.

Foremost, are the greens, kale, mustard, spinach and turnip tops, and table turnips and radishes. Besides, though somewhat refined, but still possible to mature, are beets, Chinese cabbage, endive and head lettuce.

As for greens, little need be said except as a reminder for green are normal fall garden crops. Preparing the seedbed is simple during the seedbed is simple before a crop, the surplus greens to be returned to the soil for the humus they contain. Any of these, singly, or in combination with the rest may be used. Siberian kale, Southern Curled mustard, Dwarf Essex rape, King of Denmark and Norfolk Savoy spinach. Seeding rate is 1 ounce to 200 square feet or to 50 feet of drill, except for spinach, use twice this amount of seed.

Chinese Cabbage may be started now, the seed dropped in drills and the seedlings thinned to one foot. If it develops that the plant is too short for the heads to become firm, the leaves may be used as greens. W Pak is the variety.

Beets may be drilled now, but thinned promptly so they won't hurry along. Too, only short season sorts as Crosby's Egyptian or Eclipse should be used.

Endive, started now, may mature outside, but gardeners who are fortunate in having frames will make sure by setting in transitive seedlings of 3 or 4 leaves, to mature at the first nature. Space 12 to 16 inches each way. It goes without saying that the rich soil should be made with well rotted manure, the better. Besides, it also should be worked at the rate of 1 ounce per frame, 4 feet by 6 feet, and watered in.

As the season advances, the frames should be covered with glass, and given the customary daily airings while the days, temperature enable, above zero. So protected, endive may be had until Christmas. The varieties are White or Gold Heart Curled.

Head lettuce may be raised in the same way as suggested for endive. Seedlings should be raised in a partly shaded bed and moved into the frame about the middle of this month. Their spacing should be from 6 to 8 inches in height. Of the many varieties offer, Hanson and New York or Wonderful. The former is a loose-head, delicately green, and of fine texture. New York forms a denser heart in color and possibly slightly inferior in quality, with Wonderful between the above in form as those of the "Cabbage Head" or commercial type, somewhat low by the way as "New York."

After the frames are completed and endive, the soil should be laid aside so that the frame may be given the bath-soak and freeze thoroughly to destroy disease, then to be ready for spring crops to follow.

Canning And Use Of Tomato Juice

Pearl J. Hauk, Kentucky College of Agriculture

When tomatoes are plentiful enough, juice should be canned to serve at least three or four times a week. Tomato juice may be served as an appetizer or it may be used in making sauces. It combined with potatoes it adds food value and color and flavor to congealed salads.

How to can tomato juice: Cook small and broken tomatoes until they are soft. Press through a sieve to remove skins, seeds and cores. Heat the juice, reseason if salt to each quart of juice, then cook only until it begins to boil. Thicken about 5 minutes. Pack immediately into clean, hot jars, seal and store for 20 minutes in hot water bath or 15 minutes in a steam pressure canner at 10 pounds.

Tomato Cocktail Sauce—Tomato Cocktail is one of the favorite sauces for decorating plain boiled fish, broiled shrimp, shellfish fritters, and for dressing ordinary salads.

Use chopped 1 quart of sliced white onions and 12 finely-chopped green peppers. Simmer until soft, add about twice this bulk in tomatoes and cook together over a low fire until tender. Season to taste. Pack into clean, hot jars and seal immediately.

A recent test of washable playing cards made of the very thin, flexible and cheap cellulose acetate showed the cards still serviceable after 900 hours of use.

Minnesota Farmers Fighting Forest Fires

Farmers are shown fighting a fire which swept over hundreds of acres near Markham, Minn. Orchard sprayers were used to prevent the flames from sweeping across meadows and stubble fields and wiping out more farm homes in the area, in which fifty farmers were burned out.

Crop Report Indicates Light Production In State

Kentucky's crop prospects September 1 indicated slightly improved probable production of Irish potatoes, cute, barley, apples, peaches, pears, and grapes, as compared to prospects August 1; and slight reductions in estimated probable production of corn, tame hay, tobacco, and buckwheat.

This state's September 1 prospect for total production of tobacco of all types combined this year was for 216,225,000 pounds, compared to 230,718,000 pounds of all types combined produced in 1935, and an average annual production of 262,587,000 pounds 1928 to 1932 inclusive.

Total corn production in Kentucky is estimated at 51,750,000 bushels compared to a crop last year of 42,228,000 bushels, and an average annual production of 60,300,000 bushels 1928-32 inclusive. Production prospects are forecast at 1,950,000 bushels compared to a crop last year of 1,672,000 bushels.

Oats in Kentucky are estimated at 9,000,000 bushels compared to 10,080,000 bushels last year.

The continuation of the drought in the Southeast during most of August in the Central States and the recovery of the drought conditions in the South have caused a 2 per cent decline in crop prospects during the month, but considering the country as a whole, recent rains occur to have been sufficiently general to prevent further deterioration of crops from drought since July 1.

The improved prospects for fall potatoes and for late hay and forage crops, together with the continued heavy marketings of cattle and calves, outside of a limited increase in the supply of hogs, a moderate slowdown of egg production, and a sharp reduction in the supply of lambs, are causes for the 1 per cent increase in the estimates of grain production and for further accentuates the shortage of fall fruits.

Present indications are that this year's production of fall fruits will be somewhat below the shortages of 1934 and 1935, but that apples will be only slightly larger in volume, and considerably smaller in quality, with much unmarketable fruit. Shortages are also during the 1932-35 period by shrinking a considerable part of the revenues of fruit growers and sections of the country. However, these losses were largely made up as a result of the drought, but profits may still be had. A hedge against a recommended by foliate, and both grain and mash. Keep the birds free from lice and worms. Worm and delouse birds at least twice a year.

Poultry Sales Over Year Ago

Market receipts of poultry have been running 20 per cent above the unusually light receipts of last year. The fact is indicative of a reduction in the size of flocks, and result in good part from the severe drought of 1934. The College of Agriculture at Lexington reports that the farmers may find it profitable to carry their flocks down to fall and winter flocks down to fall and winter only enough pullets to replace those they have culled out. Pullets will be ready to lay in October and will then give as good returns as hens.

Sheep are also up as a result of the drought, but profits may still be had. A hedge against a recommended by foliate, and both grain and mash. Keep the birds free from lice and worms. Worm and delouse birds at least twice a year.

Dairy Prices At Top Since 1929

Prevailing milk and butterfat prices are at the highest level since 1929, and that is the result of a continuance of high prices throughout the fall and winter, says a statement from the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture. Feed prices are advancing, and yet the advance in milk and butterfat is keeping pace with feed prices.

Recent events, according to farmers in Kentucky include the statewide Jersey Field day at Avery B. Gaines' Fairview Farm, near Carrollton; the third annual Blue Grass Jersey Field Day at Forward Farm, Leesburg, and a dairy cattle sale in spring field, and the annual Jersey sale at the Purchase Dairy Herd Improvement Association at Paris, Tenn. Payne farm at Mayfield.

Turkey Eggs O. K. For Family Table

Since there are no established rules for turkey eggs after the hatching season, the poultry department of the University of Kentucky College of Agriculture suggests that they be used in the home kitchen and sold on the market. Home the suggestion that they be used in the home, and the chicken eggs that would have been used sold to market.

By continuing much feed to turkey hens they will lay throughout the summer. Their eggs will help pay their board bill until time to fatten them for the fall and winter trade.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for September 20

CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—Romans 12:1-3, 9-17, 13:8-10; 1 Thessalonians 4:9-12; Galatians 5:22-26.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How Jesus Wants Us to Live.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Paul Explains How to Live.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Is Christian Living?

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How to Live as a Christian.

As a fitting conclusion to a three-months study of the Spread of Christianity to the gentile peoples of Western Asia, we consider the life of the great apostle to the Gentiles concerning "Christian Living."

The early chapters of Paul's epistle to the Romans present the greatest exposition of profound Christian doctrine ever written. But even as it is true that the fruit of Christian living can grow only on the tree of Christian doctrine, it is equally true that the knowledge of Christian truth should result in Christian living. Faith without works is dead.

Our lesson portion presents the true Christian life as being

I. A Life Yielded to God (Rom. 12:1).

A recognition and deep appreciation of the mercies of God leads to a yielding of body and mind in the service of God. Only as Christians our bodies are the temples of Christian living. Faith will lend our bodies to activities which destroy the service for God but rather yield the body with all its parts to God.

But after all it is the inside of the heart which is the real presenting of the body in living sacrifice is possible only when God and for cause of the full effect of the sacrifice under inside a man of steadfastness in prayer. Only as we yield ourselves to God not only for all time but for every day is it to be.

II. A Life of Service (vv. 9-16). In order to live a full life of service we are raised to serve.

Love is the first fruit of Christian service the Lord. He abides with us and His life in us enables us to love for he cleaves to that which is good. He is not hypocritical, for the spirit is aglow with real fervor for God and for cause of the full effect of the sacrifice under inside a man of steadfastness in prayer. Only as we yield ourselves to God not only for all time but for every day is it to be.

III. A Life of Humility (v. 16). In these days when we are urged to assert ourselves in the matter of rights, to "succeed" at any cost, and when pride is manifested in their worldly achievements, it is extremely old-fashioned to talk about humility, about condescending to men of low estate, and being "one in our own conceits."

But humility is a life-saving grace and a truly Christian life. Those who follow the lowly Jesus will be led in the profession. are still strongest when they are weak, and are shall go forward in real "Christian living."

Sees Hunter's Paradise In State In Few Years

Kentucky nimrods—soon may have all the advantages of hunting enjoyed by the famous Daniel Boone.

If dreams of Major James Brown come true, Kentucky is on the verge of becoming "the finest quail hunting state in the union.

Major Brown is director of the division of game and fish in the department of Conservation. He has title to a position as head of Vermont's conservation department to come to Kentucky.

Kentucky, he commented after a survey of the state's hunting possibilities, "has all the natural advantages needed for a fine quail hunting ground. There is an abundance of feed and ample cover.

"Why," he added, his keen brown negro aglow, "you've got everything here. In a few years this will be the best hunting grounds in the country."

Right now, Major Brown is working out a new plan for planting quail for the benefit of Kentucky hunters. The plan is his own "brain child" and already is in use in several states. Instead of putting out young quail as was the custom in Kentucky in the past, Major Brown is going to give them a chance to survive before he turns them loose in Kentucky fields.

Quail will be paired in captivity under Brown's new plan and the first eggs will be hatched out in incubators. Along about the middle of June each year, the adult quail will be put in coveys in the fields so they can raise more chicks in the wild. The quail hatched out in incubators will be kept in refuges until they have attained sufficient size to survive when turned loose.

Under the old system, Brown pointed out, quail were planted too young, and not enough of them survived the rigors of the winter and the pellets of hunters to provide ample breeding stock in the spring.

FROM OVER THE LINE

(By J. W. Rogers)

We met a group of Barterville friends one day last week. They all seemed to be jolly good fellows. Their names, Hanson Dotson, Charley Feebak, Thomas H. Brierly and Silas Jackson. Mr. Dotson has abandoned farming and take up contracting and building. Of all the saws we ever saw, we never saw a saw saw like his saw saws. Mr. Feeback is unemployed now. With a smile he is free and willing to own, he is looking for things to do that he ever yet known. Mr. Brierly is cherry and happy and gay, truck driving and trading from day by day. Mr. Jackson is a village blacksmith at Barterville. Sometimes his hair is crisp and long. His face is like the tan. His heart is wet with honest sweat. He earns whatever he can."

Laws provided that the validity of election campaign funds have been enacted and should be enforced. There is said to be no greater menace to a representative government than secret use of money. Certain sums are necessary and may be legitimately expended, but more for purpose of influencing election results, etc., is hatred. We favor total abolition of the practice of using secret election campaign funds in Presidential election campaigns.

Mr. Doris Caswell, in business at junction of Carlisle pike with Maysville and Lexington highway, says "Everybody ought to be a Republican at a joke on Mr. Caswell if everybody should be a Democrat after the November election, for both policy and principle."

What good things can come from Ishmael Chapel church. We shall never forget that she was a part of the Moorefield circuit of Methodism with Rev. Mr. Pruett in charge. "There's a good time coming, a good time coming" is the song.

FUN ON THE FARM

(Farmers Home Journal)

Rural communities are realizing more and more, the necessity for wholesome recreation. When all of us can get together and indulge in fun our personal worries grow smaller, and we are beginning to appreciate some of the things we have in common.

In Louisiana all kinds of recreational projects have been encouraged. Carried out by rural folks who have organized dramatic clubs, community bands, musical clubs. Nature study clubs, reading circles and the like have developed community houses for their own activities.

One favorite recreation that has been developed recently in the South is the community "singing convention." At designated times people from all over the congregate and spend their time getting acquainted and singing all kinds of songs that everybody knows and loves. The country folks are crowded with young women, and young people, headed by their leaders, and singing.

You can probably think of other forms of entertainment that will cost your community little, save a little effort and some invested by organized work. Every community has someone in its midst who can "start the ball rolling"—and once started, you'll find unmeasured joy in being able to create your own recreation in your own home community. Let's have more "fun on the farm."

I never go anywhere, but sometimes the company comes and takes me out; it all depends on whether you pay your bills or not. I am the bell of the town, and while I do not wear jewelry, I often get rings. Whether I do things or not, a lot of people nail me to the wall and I like music, but the only music I get is, chin music. I get all the popular airs and the most popular is hot air,

HARLAN'S VOTE AND REGISTRATION

(Courier-Journal)

Harlan County's August registration, showing a Republican majority of 2,000, makes a considerable hole in the traditional strength of the old Eleventh, now Fifth, Congressional District. Harlan could be depended upon to give a Republican majority before the Brock Gilbert landslide passed. The registration, while 3,500 short of the ballots cast in the 1935 State election, apportions the party affiliation in approximately the same proportion. The registered Republican majority is about 200 in excess of the 1935 majority and 800 in excess of Hoover's in 1932. This bears out the estimate that additional registration will favor party standing little. The 21,378 who participated in the election last year were not far short of the entire electorate among Harlan's 64,552 population. Segration is yet to come in rural precincts. It will be simpler and more than population in cities, more inconvenient in others. Rural challengers are unainted with all the voters in their communities. On the other hand, challenged registrants may be remote from the Court House. In the county like Harlan has, besides its isolated mountain precincts, the difficulties of the numerous porated mining camps. The first registration is the most trouble-some. It is less so than it might have been because of the force thoughtfully provide for precinct registration at the August primary. Rural Kentucky is making better progress than Chicago with its first permanent registration.

CRUEL HOAX

(Big Sandy News Recorder)

The grave Mr. and Mrs. Alpha Conley had dug at Crockett for their son was filled Tuesday after they had grieved for four days over a false report that he had been killed in an automobile accident in Akron, Ohio.

The report started with a telephone call last Thursday night to Roscoe Hutchinson, a Morehead merchant, that his nephew, William Henry Copley, 27 years old, had been killed in an automobile accident near Akron, where he works in a rubber factory.

Hutchinson said the person making the call represented himself as an acquaintance, Quincy Barker, told him of the fatal accident and said the body would be sent to him at Morehead, arriving Saturday morning.

Hutchinson notified Conley's parents at Crockett, on Elkforl, and arrangements were made for the funeral there Monday. When the body failed to arrive Saturday night Hutchinson telegraphed this ex- choice for president, was printed press agency at Akron, then tele- one three of the newspapers phoned Frank Tellrey, another of that day.
